OBSCURE LANGUAGE FROM ARTFUL WILLIAM, ON BASE BALL.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

Which I wish to declare—
In the language of Harte—
That for games where a share
Of muscle and skill alike take a part,
The National game is peculiar—
Which knowledge I'm free to impart.

Base Ball is its name;
And I shall not deny
In regard to the same
What that name might imply,
But we smiled as we saw the ball coming,
And we "took it," when it came nigh.

It was August the third,
And quite soft was the skies;
And it might be inferred
That the ball was likewise;
Which you'd hardly have thought
Had you been there and "taken" those flies.

Which we had a small game,
And our club took a hand;
It was Base Ball, the same
Which we did understand;
And we smiled as we fielded the rubber,
In a way that put out the third hand.

Yet the ball it was struck
In a way I adore,
And I own I was struck
At the state of our score;
Which was stuffed full of runs, with no outs,
And the same with intent to make more.

But the points that were played
By that gallant B. C.,
And the runs that we made
Were quite frightful to see—
Till at last we made a home run,
Which the same it was scored unto me.

Then I looked at the foe,
And they gazed upon me,
As they rose up to go,
And said:—"Can this be?
We are defeated by superior playing—"
And they went for a glass of—warm tea.

In the innings next played
They did not make a run,
But the score book was laid
Like plums in a bun,
With the runs that our club had been making,
In the game we so skillfully won.

In the game, which was long,
We made runs ninety-four,
Which was coming it strong,
Yet we might have made more;
And we found our opponents defeated,
Nine "goose eggs" completing their score.

Which is why I remark,
In the language of Harte,
That for games where a spark
Of muscle and skill alike take a part,
Base Ball is a trifle superior,
Which I state "in the interest of Art."

A LILY AND A ROSE;

OR,

THE SCHEMER AND HIS VICTIMS.

CHAPTER IV.

LILIAN.

Mr. Raymond Garton's "evenings," as he was pleased to call them, were successful ones. His villa at St. John's Wood was large and commodious, his servants noiseless as himself and perfectly trained, and his cook a marvel of perfection. Add to this, that he was gifted with the knowledge of how to select his company, that his rooms were elegantly furnished, and that his ward, Miss Lilian Garton, was an heiress of great beauty, and none will wonder that the weekly gatherings at Snowdon Villa were well attended.

On the Thursday evening for which Leonard Grantley's invite stood, the drawing rooms were well filled, but not crowded.—"Never crowd," was a favorite maxim of Mr. Garton's, "and annoy your visitors and worry yourself!"—and the magnificent chandeliers were throwing floods of subdued light upon the hangings of light blue satin, drawn back at intervals to reveal some choice picture or statuette, where it hung against the wall, or stood in some tinted niche.

The furniture of light ormulo and buhl was of the most superb description, and yet so tastefully selected and arranged that it had no appearance of gaudiness.

Beyond the long reach of rooms, and separated from them by a fall of lace and satin curtains, was a conservatory, filled with exotic flowers, plants and English ferns. Statues—a few only—but gems in their way—gleamed from amongst the green foliage and gave the place a classical look that was heightened by the streams of scented water that sprang and fell from the lips of half-a-dozen water nymphs, and splashed the ferns that concealed the marble basins from view.

High up among the creeping exotics, hung at intervals small, Turkish swinging lamps, shedding a soft, subdued light, that seemed to be the radiance of many moons falling upon the green leaves and glorious flowers. The twitter and occasional singing of a number of birds, and the whisk of their wings as they flew from plant to fern, and the plash of the scented fountains, were the only sounds—and pleasant ones—that broke the stillness of this world of artificial nature.

A small group of men and women were standing before a small picture that hung in the drawing room. Round its massive gilt frame, folds of black velvet fell on each side, adding a solemnity and depth to the awful face that stood out upon the canvas.

"It is a marvel, Miss Garton," remarked a tall finely built man, lowering his eye glass and turning towards a beautiful girl, who was sitting on a fauteuil, talking to an elderly gentleman, with a military air and a greyish moustache.

"Is it not beautiful, Mr. Maurice? Dreadfully beautiful!" I call it. "I assure you that those eyes seem alive to me and I can almost fancy that I shall see the hand move if I look long enough at it."

"Who is the painter?" drawled another man, an exquisite of the first water, by name, Walter Fitzherbert—by profession, a soldier; by appearance, a languid "swell," in heart, a man and a gentleman. One of the men who hang about our drawing rooms, drawling, languid common place, and ride with the six hundred across the death sweep of Balaklava with a smile on their face and a careless cheer upon their lips—"Who is the painter?"

"Quite an unknown man," replied Lilian Garton. "A Mr. Leonard Grantley. Mr. Garton has asked him to honor us to-night——"

"Grantley! Grantley!" repeated the Indian officer, sitting beside her; "surely I remember that name—a Norfolk name. The Grantleys are one of the oldest and noblest families in England. I remember staying when a lad at their manor, as a page, with the Duke of Dean."

"Indeed!" said Miss Garton. "How romantic! My unknown artist turns out to be the descendant of a noble name and a large estate!"

"Pardon me," returned the officer quickly, and with a slightly bitter laugh, "I did not say the estate was his. My memory has grown clearer within the last few minutes, and I remember that old Welford Grantley—who must have been this Leonard Grantley's grandfather—went the pace pretty heavily and mortgaged the old house from cellar to roof, cut down the timber, and even sold the old mahogany carved furniture that had been the pride and boast of the Grantleys for over a century and a half. Theodore Grantley, the young man's father, didn't do much towards bringing things straight. When her his eldest son, Harold, would have proved himself the Curtius of his family, we can't say, for he was drowned at Calais, fell over the pier or something of the sort, and left his brother, this present Leonard, to reign in his stead."

"Quite right," said a soft voice behind them, so suddenly, with all its softness, that the old general started, and looked round to find Garton leaning against the fauteuil. "Your memory, general, is infallible. The house—both name and mansion—is ruined. The old manor is gradually tumbling to mother earth, and the pleasure grounds are overgrown and choked with weeds."

"Nothing remains," continued the speaker, with a pleasant smile, as if he was telling of a sudden shower of good fortune that had happened to some one, instead of detailing the ruin of a house and name.

"Nothing remains to Leonard Grantley, but his talent, his honor and——"

"Mr. Leonard Grantley," announced a servant, and the artist entered the room, with his fine, noble looking face, and wealth of silky brown hair rippling from his forehead.

Lilian Garton, completing Raymond Garton's oration, murmured to herself:—

"And his handsome face!"

Mr. Garton was at his side in a moment, his even toned voice pouring out a well bred welcome, and his soft, white hands grasping his new friend's flat with a velvety clasp.

"Let me make you known to my niece and a few of the people here!" he said. And Leonard found himself bowing to a number of ladies and a few men, and then by some chance or other he was seated beside Miss Garton, listening to that lady's encomiums on Lady Macbeth.

"Will you let me thank you," she said, with a hesitation that made her well toned voice sound very musical in Leonard's ears. "Will you let me thank you for painting so beautiful a picture as my Lady Macbeth! You see," she added with a smile, "I say 'my,' because I have claimed it as my own."

"There are no thanks due to me," replied Leonard, with a low laugh that, in its turn, sounded pleasantly in Lilian Garton's ears. "Mr. Garton paid me a great deal too much money for it, so that it belongs to you by more than legal right."

The girl colored slightly, and with an eagerness sudden and natural, laid her small, white hand upon his arm——

"Is I do you think that because a person gives a pile of gold down to the genius who has created something wonderful or beautiful that he or she has bought it?"

Leonard smiled. "According to the world's creed," he replied, "a poet writes a poem at a guinea a line, and he and his readers are quits. An artist paints a face that pleases his Majesty the Public, and the public gives him so many guidon medals for his piece of painted canvas, and they are quits, too. Beyond that lies a world of speculation I should tremble to enter on."

Lilian smiled. "At least, you will believe that I do not think us 'quits,' as you call it. I am your debtor for Lady Macbeth, if the poor price I paid were seventy times seven more than it was."

Leonard bowed, and for a few minutes they were silent, listening to the whirl of music that floated through the room from the grand piano. A musician of some note was seated at the instrument, his rapid hands wringing from its ivory keys a world of melody, now stirring and swift like the rush of a battle, again soft and gentle like the sough of the summer breeze among the trees.

"Do you play or sing?" said Lilian softly.

"Neither," replied Leonard, "I love true music as all men do, but I have no power to call it forth."

The master rose from the piano and walked quietly down to the lower end of the room, where he was immediately surrounded by a group of men who were quiet but sincere in their praise. Mingling with their voices floated the soft purring of Raymond Garton, and Leonard, as he caught the tone, felt the strange antipathy growing within him towards that handsome, well mannered host.

With an abruptness that startled the beautiful girl by his side, he said——

"Mr. Garton is no relative of yours, I think?"

"Yes, and no," laughingly replied Lillian; "he is a cousin, many hundred times removed. The fact of our names being the same has often led people into the mistake that we were near of kin."

Somehow or another, Leonard Grantley could not help feeling, and looked relieved, and was about to ask her to walk into the conservatory, when the door was again softly opened and a footman announced Lord St. Aubyn.

Looking up, Leonard saw a tall, finely-built man enter, whose face chained his attention and riveted his eyes upon it at once.

It was a grand face with all its weariness; the perfectly cut lips a little—a shade only—compressed with an air of decision almost amounting to sternness, the dark brown eyes filled with a look of weary sadness, yet changing in a moment with a kindly glance, if the owner pleased. Dark hair, cut too close to curl, but with thick, silky half curls falling on the white, high forehead, added to the nobility of the face, and stamped Lord St. Aubyn with the full mark of blood and race.

There was a buzz in the room as he entered, and, after nodding here and there, made his way to Miss Garton.

"Ah, my lord," she said, with a smile, "late as usual! You have lost Herr Vaubon's Fantasia."

"I'm very sorry," replied St. Aubyn, looking not a whit depressed. "I had a heavy dinner and could not get away. No man would be late at Miss Garton's gatherings, you know, if he could help it." The compliment was spoken with the greatest ease and appearance of truth; and then his lordship threw himself wearily on a seat facing Miss Garton. "Have you sung yet?" he asked presently, bending towards her.

"No, I don't think I shall this evening," she replied, shaking her head.

"I sincerely hope you will," said St. Aubyn. "It would be rather cruel to my mare if you did not."

"Your mare!" repeated the girl, with a look of astonishment.

"Yes, I came down in my cab and told my man not to spare her. She's a bright bay, you know, but she looked very much like a speckled Arabian as she pulled up at your door, with the foam upon her."

"What a shame!" rebuked Lillian Garton. "Is it that pretty mare I admired so much that you have been illusing so?"

"I don't know," replied St. Aubyn, with an absent air, his eyes fixed upon the black velvet enshrined picture opsite him.

Leonard had risen and walked across the room, and was inspecting the various old masters and new paintings, under the ciceroneship of Mr. Garton. The whole scene was new to him, and in the various faces and manners were so many "studies" to his artistic eye.

The novelty was pleasing and the murmur of well bred voices and the chiming of nicely toned laughter broke not unpleasantly upon his ear.

"That's a remarkable picture, and a good one," said St. Aubyn, still looking at Lady Mabeth.

"Ah, is it no?"

St. Aubyn rose slowly and walked over to the picture, then returning he threw himself into a chair again with the same weary look.

"Yes; a good face," he said; "quite out of the common; whose is it?"

"Lady Macbeth," replied Miss Garton.

"Yes; but the artist?" said St. Aubyn, taking up an ivory crucifix that lay on the table at his side as he spoke.

"Mr. Leonard Grantley," replied Lillian.

"Leonard Grantley?" repeated St. Aubyn, dropping the crucifix, while his face grew suddenly white and his eyes filled with a sharp pain.

Only for a moment though. Before Lillian could utter an exclamation of alarm at the sudden and awful change in his countenance, he had picked up the crucifix, the livid hue had vanished from his face, and his voice was calm and indifferent again, as he said:—

"Grantley? An old name, I——"

"St. Aubyn," broke in the soft voice of Raymond Garton, "let me introduce to you my friend, Mr. Grantley."

Like a lion brought to bay, St. Aubyn turned sharply, his lips compressed and his eyes gleaming with an expression that was half of pain and half of pleasure.

Both men bowed, and St. Aubyn with a quiet smile and a glance at Lady Macbeth, said:—

"I know you already, Mr. Grantley."

Leonard smiled in return, as he answered:—

"My picture, you mean?"

"Sometimes a man's picture is himself," replied St. Aubyn, emphatically.

"Not always," said Leonard, quietly, "at least it is to be hoped so."

St. Aubyn made no reply, but turning to Miss Garton, said:—

"Will you not sing now? I have waited very patiently," and he offered her his arm.

Leonard Grantley dropped into the seat Lillian Garton had just vacated, and watched the two as they walked down the room. There was a slight buzz and pause as Lillian Garton seated herself at the piano, and Willie Fitzherbert who was sitting near Leonard, leisurely turning over a portfolio of sketches, drawings, etc.

"By Jove at last!" and throwing the drawings down, leant back comfortably, prepared to listen.

A burst of music, a rapid prelude rising and falling like a troubled sea, and then a sudden lull, a wail of music, and the sweetest voice that ever a man listened to floated through the room with the burden of a plaintive song.

Leonard Grantley listened spell bound. Of a poetic temperament and possessing fine sensibilities, the subtle music stole over his senses and carried him away.

He lost all consciousness of the present scene and the living actors around. Lost everything but the melody that stole over and enthralled him. As the last verse rose sorrowfully through the room—

"Let the river flow on with the stream,
Let it float in sweet love's light,
Let the past go by in a dream,
As a sorrowful dream in the night," he rose from his seat, drawn as with an invisible chain towards the singer, and almost unconsciously he laid his hand upon her arm as he whispered:—

"I thank you."

Looking up with a startled smile Lillian Garton met his gaze of passionate admiration, and her eyes fell before his, and her face crimsoned.

St. Aubyn stood leaning against the piano watching the two, and his face darkened for a moment as he saw the look and the blush, but he did not move.

"Will you sing again?" said Leonard, softly; he could not have spoken louder to save his life.

"Not again," she said, almost imploringly. "I am very warm; will you take me into the conservatory?"

Leonard's eyes lit up as her hand rested lightly on his arm, and a thrill ran through his frame that he had never felt before as he found himself alone with this lovely heiress. Alone amidst the ferns and flowers, the plash of the fountains and the singing of the birds, and he thought within himself—

"The drear, silent days have ended, and the life I have dreamt of and longed for has commenced at last!"

So it is. Life begins fairly, sweetly; the way is gladdened with the song of birds and the perfume of many colored flowers, the sun shines warmly upon the fresh and hopeful pilgrim, and the way of life seems a journey of endless joy and unceasing delight, but have a care, Leonard Grantley; there are rocks and thorns in the road beyond, and the storm clouds are already gathering to hide the sun that shines now so gloriously!

* * * * * * *

"Going, St. Aubyn, already?" said Mr. Garton, in a voice of reproach.

"Yes; I am tired," was the calm reply. "My cab."

CHAPTER V.

ST. AUBYN THE COLD.

"Where to, my lord?" said the servant, as St. Aubyn entered his cab.

"Home," was the reply. "Stay," he added, wearily, "to Caprier's."

Caprier's was the great gaming club of the upper Ten. Like Crockford's, it had been the ruin of many of the scions of noble houses, of hundreds of unfledged lords and dukes, squires and knights, and its green tables still swallowed with crocodile jaws many a princely fortune and wrecked many a noble name.

Tapestried with blue satin, sparkling with ormolu and buhl, with enormous candelabra scintillating floods of light, and subtle perfumes penetrating through its cushions and floors, the place had the appearance of a sultan's palace, the chambers of the harem, or the state apartments of a king's residence.

Adjoining the grand gaming hall was a smaller salon, not less magnificent than the larger one, whose tables were spread with every luxury known. Wine was there, of the choicest in quality, unlimited in quantity. Drinks and viands were supplied gratis by the wealthy company that owned the place. Many were the men who had risen from that lordly supper and staggered under the influence of the Chateau Lafitte and Moet into the next salon to lose their wealth, health, peace of mind—everything save honor, at the ruinable green table.

The club was fashionable. Its very danger lent it a fascination which quieter clubs lacked. Men who belonged to Caprier's were marked as the elite, and to have won or lost a fortune within its gilded walls rendered you, for a season, a lion of note.

MR. HENRY EYTINGE, Actor.

For Biographical Sketch see another Page.

St. Aubyn the last of a noble race, possessed of untold wealth, was a member of the fatal club. Gaming had no fascination for him. He seldom entered the green doors that had barred out all hope for so many; but on the few occasions on which he visited Caprier's he found a ready welcome, and alas! many friends. To-night the weary look upon his face was more marked than ever, and he murmured as he stood with his hand upon the green doors:—

"Now to kill thought, to slay the past, if only for a night!"

The next moment he was treading the carpet of velvet pile and shaking hands with a number of men who came to greet him.

"Quite the truant, St. Aubyn," said a tall, noble looking fellow, with a heavy black moustache. "Quite the truant. When has Caprier's seen thy face last?"

"A long time since, Cecil," replied St. Aubyn.

"I thought, indeed Brandon said—you never can believe Brandon, you know—that the last time you were here the count cleared the St. Aubyn estate off your hands."

St. Aubyn laughed.

"No, Cecil, dear boy, the manor and timber are still mine, though I have done my best to melt them."

"Ah, you are fortunate," said a young, fair haired fellow, with gentle, childlike blue eyes and a musical voice. "I lost Trehearne last night, timber and all." And the young Earl of Trehearne spoke of the loss of his fortune and the great house that had been the home of the Trehearnes for centuries without a change of countenance, without a shadow across the bright blue eyes, without a tremor in the clear voice, without one sign of emotion. For he is not an aristocrat.

"Ah, Charlie, you here!" exclaimed St. Aubyn, grasping his hand, "and so you have come to grief," he said, gravely.

"Yes," was the reply, with a laugh, "a rare run of ill-luck. The Goodwood nearly drained me, last night's work has cleared me of every shilling. By-the-way, you lost rather heavily on the Goodwood."

"Five thousand," coolly replied St. Aubyn. "It would have been fifteen, but Cecil here advised me to hedge, and you know I always take his advice in turf matters."

"Ah, you're a lucky fellow," said Charlie Trehearne, strolling off towards the upper salon. "I'm going to get some wine. Drinking's rather slow after roulette, but noblesse oblige, you know." And he laughed a careless laugh.

"And the Trehearnes date back two hundred years," thought St. Aubyn grimly, as he watched the flaxen head of the young earl disappear through the curtained doorway. Then he turned to Cecil Clare with a smile—

"Come, Clare, we'll make a table for chicken hazard. Pray the gods for good fortune, and we'll break the bank. Ah, count, glad to see you. In good luck, as usual. Always lucky. Is it to Jupiter, Venus, or Hebe, you offer up your sacrifices?"

"Neither," replied Count de Lane; "Mammon."

"The best god of all gods, say I," broke in Cecil, "and the most treacherous."

St. Aubyn laughed, and the three men walked towards the "fatal green."

Three hours afterwards, while the cards were still falling on the table in a silent shower, and crisp bank notes and checks were changing hands with fearful rapidity, two men entered. One we know, Raymond Garton; the other was a young nobleman, a mere boy, who leant on the arm of his handsome companion and seemed to look up to him as mentor and guide. A quick smile, almost cunning in its quickness, like a flash of light, crossed the face of Raymond as his eyes rested on St. Aubyn, and he said in a low voice to his companion:—

"You will have some supper before you play, Dale?"

"Ye—es," drawled the boy, hesitatingly.

"Come along, then," rejoined Raymond Garton, and the two passed unnoticed through the grand salon into the smaller one.

An hour passed. A dead silence, broken only by the rattle of coin and the occasional call of the cards, reigned in the salon.

At one of the tables St. Aubyn's party were still at chicken hazard, and at another the Count de Lane, the boy Lord Dale and Raymond Garton were playing. St. Aubyn, looking up and in the middle of a deal, caught sight of the young earl's face and frowned as he saw that it was white and excited.

With a pleasant smile upon his face and his eyes half hidden beneath their finely shaped, jet black brows, Raymond Garton handled the cards deftly and played with that noiseless grace and quickness that belonged to him.

The Count de Lane, a gamester of every city in the world, was the only one of the three whose face bore no expression; a dead calm had settled upon the clear brow and the set lips were expressionless as the sphynx's. A pile of bank notes, new and crisp, was in the centre of the table and the eyes of the boy peer were fixed upon them with a look of intense excitement, expectation, despair.

Suddenly the soft voice of Raymond Garton broke the silence.

"Shall we increase or decrease?" with a half nod towards the notes, addressing the Count de Lane.

"Exactly as his lordship likes," replied the count calmly.

"What have we on the table?" asked the boy, anxiously.

"Five thousand each, my lord," said Raymond Garton.

"We'll double the stakes, then," said Lord Dale, in vain trying to suppress the quiver that would ring in his voice.

"Your deal, Mr. Garton," said the count, passing the cards.

"Mine?" repeated Garton, softly; "I—I thought I dealt last?"

"No, no," broke in the boy, sharply. "It is your deal, for heaven's sake be quick."

A glance swift as lightning passed between the count and Garton, then the latter dealt the cards. Once again St. Aubyn looked on and saw the white face of the young peer glistening with a cold sweat, and then his eyes fell upon the heap of notes, and the same frown, but darker than before, crossed his cold, calm face.

"King, knave, the nine," said the count, naming his cards, as he followed the play.

"The King," repeated Garton, "and the ace. The game is mine!"

Two words only broke from the trembling lips of the lad, as he rose from the table and clenched the back of his chair.

"My God!"

Then while Raymond Garton gathered up the thirty thousand pounds he wiped the cold sweat from his brow.

"You will find some excellent Lafitte in the salon, my lord," said the calm voice of the count.

"Yes," said the boy, vacantly, his eyes wandering round the room with a look of despair that was heartrending. "I'll go and get some, this place is hot, very hot."

And he walked at first with a light stagger as one intoxicated, then steadily towards the supper-room. As he passed the hazard table, St. Aubyn, with a sudden movement, held out his hand.

"Ah, Willie, how are you? Isn't this the night of Lady Dale's ball?"

"Yes," replied the boy hoarsely, with a crimson face.

St. Aubyn lifted his eyebrows. "Then what are you doing here?" he said gently, in so low a tone that none heard, save the boy.

"I—I—was tired and bored—bored to death."

"And you fled to cearte for relief," continued St. Aubyn, grimly. "Have you lost?"

"Twenty thousand pounds," was the low reply.

St. Aubyn's face showed no sign, calm and cold as a statue's, but he murmured:—

"And the Dale estates mortgaged, house and lands."

Then he turned to the table again, and his clear, even voice was heard calling the cards as composedly as if he had not just witnessed the utter ruin of another noble house; but his eyes were raised once and lit ominously upon the Count de Lane and Raymond Garton, two victors in the game in which the boy peer had been to-night a loser, where they were standing talking. Lord Dale, with steady footsteps, now passed into the supper-room, and the hazard table still went on its way, and the two men, lounging gracefully and easily at the upper end of the salon, still talked and smiled.

Another hour and St. Aubyn rose with a light laugh from the table.

"Hold, enough!" he said pleasantly. "Cecil, two more such runs of luck on your part and St. Aubyn will be melted, indeed. Bertram, will you have a check or notes?"

"Lord St. Aubyn's checks are quite as valuable as Bank of England notes, and more so because they bear his di tinguished autograph," replied Bertram with a smile.

"Dont chaff, Bertram, dear boy," replied St. Aubyn with a pleasant smile, as he sat down and wrote a check for two thousand pounds.

"Now, Cecil, notes or check?"

"Check, for the same reason," said Cecil Clare. "What a blessed thing a check book is! I have not had one for years. If ever I have another I'll put it in a glass case and stick it on Lady Clare's drawing room table, to show my people that Cecil Clare has once more the root of all evil at his bankers."

And Cecil Clare, who had spent two fortunes and was running through the third, laughed blithely, as if poverty were the fitting appendage to a high and mighty name.

"There you are, then," said St. Aubyn, folding another check for a like amount and handing it. "Now, will you three come dine with me to-morrow, at Richmond? I have just bought a little box there, a snug little den, and Rissoli goes down there to-night."

Rissoli was Lord St. Aubyn's cook, known throughout the length and breadth of the ton as the chief of culinary artists.

"If Rissoli be there, who can refuse?" said Cecil Clare.

"We'll come with more than pleasure, with ecstacies of delight!" replied Lord Bertram. "There is only one man I respect more than Napoleon, and he is Rissoli; honored be his name."

"And stew pans?" finished St. Aubyn.

"Exactly so," said Cecil. "Voukey vous! A man's dinner is the most important thing in his life, isn't it, Bertram?"

"It is," replied Lord Bertram, with mock solemnity.

"Then come early to-morrow," said St. Aubyn, with a light laugh. "Charlie Warne will take us down from the 'Rag.' Be there at three, and I'll meet you."

"All right," said the three men.

"Is your cab waiting, St. Aubyn?" said Cecil, signing to a footman, as he spoke, to bring his overcoat.

"No; I will home, replied Sir. Aubyn. "Wait for me a moment, I am going to get some wine." And he laid his hand upon the lace curtains that divided the two salons.

Lord Bertram and Trehearne and several others had gone. Cecil Clare was lounging against the pedestal of a Venus, looking over his betting book, and still at the upper end of the room were the Count de Lane and Raymond Garton. Both men were eagerly talking, and Raymond Garton's eyes wandered once or twice to the spot where the tall, noble figure of St. Aubyn stood in the midst of the group.

Suddenly, the stillness of the room was broken by a shar-p cry that rang out from the other salon and before the startled men could move, or utter an exclamation, the lace curtains were thrust aside with a sudden jerk, and the form of St. Aubyn was standing in the doorway, the silk and lace falling at each side of him. His face was white as death, his eyes blazing with the fire of rage and his clear cut lips compressed and livid with a nameless horror.

Raising one hand and pointing towards the two men at the upper end of the room, he said, in a voice that drove the blood from the face of all who heard it, a voice ringing loud and clear yet sounding low and stern—

"Raymond Garton, come and see your work, it lies here ready for you!"

With a white face, Raymond and the count came hastily towards him. Cecil Clare starting forward, while half a dozen footmen gathered together with frightened looks, and stood waiting to be told to follow.

Through the doorway and into the supper room, the morning light penetrated the velvet curtains and fell in a stream upon the body of a lad lying, where it had fallen upon its back, half buried in the soft satin couch.

The face, upon which the light fell, was white and dead, and there was that across his throat you would not care to see. A stream of blood trickled down from the ugly gash and gathered in a pool upon the thick carpet. Clenched in the small, boyish hand, with the iron grasp of death, was a silver handled table knife, its blade red and discolored, its costly handle clotted and wet with the life blood of the young Lord Dale.

"Great God, this is awful!" exclaimed Cecil Clare, bending over the body and laying his hand upon the icy cheek.

"He is quite dead and cold!"

A shudder ran through them all save Lord St. Aubyn. With folded arms and hard, set face, he looked down upon the staring eyes of the poor dead boy and moved not an inch.

"Committed suicide! How shocking!" said the count, in his cold, metallic voice, that even the frightful sight before him could not melt or soften.

"Suicide!" echoed St. Aubyn, turning sternly upon the speaker, "suicide! No suicide. No! but murder! And you," turning towards Raymond Garton where he stood, half behind the count and Cecil Clare, "and you, Raymond Garton, are his murderer, as surely as if you held that blood-stained knife in your hand!"

Sternly, unflinchingly, the accusation was hurled forth, the speaker drawn to his full height, his eyes fixed upon the figure of the accused. For a moment there was a dead silence, then the Count de Lane was pushed aside, and Raymond Garton stepped forth.

His eyes were flashing, and his hand, that he stretched forth with a threatening finger, was shaking, but not with fear now, but with rage.

"Be careful who you call murderer, Lord St. Aubyn!" he hissed. "Those who live in glass houses are unwise to throw stones."

Then before the hearers could recover from their astonishment, he had turned and walked towards the doorway.

With his hand upon the curtain he turned, a fiendish smile upon his face, and his eyes lit up with a savage threat.

"Beware! Lord St. Aubyn!" he cried hoarsely, in a voice trembling with suppressed passion.

GIVE THE POOR DEVIL HIS DUE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BY DR. PIERRE BLANC.

I've traveled about a bit in my life,
Of troubles I've seen a few,
And found a good plan to keep out of strife,
'Tis give the poor devil his due.

This world is large, there is room for all,
And there's work for all to do,
From winter to spring, from summer to fall,
Just give the poor devil his due.

If poverty's cloud hangs over your head,
And the sun is hid from view,
Do not borrow trouble, care, fear nor dread,
But give the poor devil his due.

Perhaps it seems hard, but then do not fear,
Fortune's smile may be resting on you,
And hopes that have foundered will again appear;
Then give the poor devil his due.

As you journey on toward the close of life,
(A path we must all go through),
You'll end your trouble and end your strife,
And you'll give the poor devil his due.

Then from this world you will gently pass,
Like a drop of the morning dew,
You'll reach your well-earned rest at last,
And the devil will have what's his due.

CHAPTER LI.

THE LAST OF BROADMEAD.

A fresh difficulty presented itself to Diana as she walked up from the dolphin-crowned iron gates to the Manor House. What was she to say to Mrs. Seaton and how explain to her this sudden journey?

She was naturally a good deal agitated. She knew that she was taking a very decided and important step; and although she in no way drew back from it, she was not blind to the difficulties she should have to encounter.

Mrs. Seaton had not yet come down; she seldom did until luncheon time, so Diana went to speak to her.

"Where have you been all the morning, Diana? Prime says she saw you driving along the avenue directly after breakfast. You ought not to go out in the sun now I want; and I wanted to say several things to you, for I had a long letter from Jasper, and there seems to be a good many things yet that we shall have to consider."

Diana sat down, for she trembled so that she could scarcely stand.

"You will bring on palpitations if you fly about in this ridiculous manner," said Mrs. Seaton. "I suppose you have been to the Meria and have all but scampered across the fields. You really should be more dignified now that you are going to be married, Di. Besides, it is very injurious. Moderate exercise is all very well; but these violent exertions I don't approve of, and you will be quite ill when Jasper comes home."

"I shall be away when Jasper comes home," answered Diana, speaking very slowly, so as to ensure her words coming out clearly and steadily. "I am going to Marchington this afternoon."

And she looked fixedly at Mrs. Seaton.

"Are you mad, Diana?" asked Mrs. Seaton—noting, for the first time, the strange, agonized expression of the girl's face.

"No," replied Diana, her nerve rising now that she had made a plunge:—"I am not mad. John Carteret is dying at Marchington and I am going to see him before he dies."

Mrs. Seaton turned as white as Diana, and Diana thought she appeared as if about to faint.

"How do you know? What do you mean?" she stammered out.

"By a fortunate mistake," said Diana, gaining more and more courage, "a letter that I ought not to have received until after Mr. Carteret's death was posted by accident. A second letter from his sister explains it; and I learn that John Carteret is not married and that he has never loved any one but me. He has been true to me—truer than I have been; and now he is dying and I am going to him."

"Absurd—pray don't talk such nonsense, Diana. You are engaged to Jasper. You can't go. You must not go. I never heard of such a thing."

But Diana's old spirit had returned.

"I am going and nothing shall hinder me. I love John Carteret with all my heart, and soul, and strength. I do not care for Jasper."

And she walked out of the room, leaving Mrs. Seaton in a state bordering upon frenzy. What would Jasper say? What was she to do? What could Mrs. Seaton do to prevent it? Perhaps she could persuade Diana to wait until Jasper's return.

After awhile she rang the bell.

"Prime, tell Miss Ellis I wish to speak to her again."

Diana did not come immediately. She was heaping her clothes into a trunk, scarcely knowing what she was doing, and yet selecting with strange instinctive discrimination. When she had ended her task, she returned to Mrs. Seaton's room.

"I am sorry to hear about Mr. Carteret's illness, Di. But I dare say it is not so bad as you imagine. You had better wait until Jasper returns, and then he can go to Marchington, and see all about it. It is not proper for you to go alone."

"I am not going alone. Miss Pyecroft is going with me."

"Miss Pyecroft!—a meddling old goose. What right has she to interfere in other people's business?" asked Mrs. Seaton, waxing wroth again.

"She thinks I ought not to go with the Neris."

"With the Neris? I should think not. Then it is as I could well imagine. Those scheming, plotting, disreputable foreigners are at the bottom of this conspiracy to bring you and that poverty-stricken curate together again. It is shameful."

Diana sprang towards Mrs. Seaton.

"Silence!" she exclaimed, in so imperative a voice that Mrs. Seaton shrank back, muttering to herself:—

"I believe she is a tigress."

"Silence!" repeated Diana. "Say nothing against John Cateret or my friends. I have been deceived, betrayed, imposed upon, and you know it, and Jasper too. Give him this paper when he returns, and tell him to think no more of me, for I am almost beginning to hate him again."

She tossed Madame de Moulne's memorandum, which she had enclosed in an envelope, upon the table, and was turning away.

"Stop!" said Mrs. Seaton. "I wish you to understand one thing—if you leave my house in this extraordinary manner you do not return to it."

"I have no wish to do so," replied Diana; "I do not intend it."

And yet until that moment his necessity had never occurred to her. Now it seemed all at once clear to her that the Manor House could never be a home for her again, and a feeling of wonder passed across her mind that she had not thought of it before. Even now she did not realise how much was comprehended in that necessity; the evil of the present being all sufficient to overpower every thought of the future. Her indignation, also, at her own suffering, and at John Carteret's suffering, brought about, as she now firmly believed, through Jasper and Mrs. Seaton, though she understood not how—drove away every sentiment of gratitude that she might otherwise have felt for their long care of her. Grief, fear, perplexity, anxiety, had wrought her up almost to madness.

"I never wish to see Broadmead again," she said, passionately.

"And I never wish to see you here again," returned Mrs. Seaton, as warmly.

"Cruel, passionate, insolent, ungrateful to the end; turning against your benefactors, when you should remember that to them you owe food, clothing, shelter, everything. Even the very money that is a sibling you to perform this act of insubordination has been furnished by my infatuated son."

They were bitter words—the more bitter for the truth they contained. Diana drew out her purse, into which she had crammed all the money that Jasper had so liberally supplied—and so deliberately that she had never missed of it in this answer before. She laid it on the table beside the letter and walked out of the room.

"I have no money," she said to Miss Pyecroft as she entered the dr. "Will you lend me some?"

"I have thought of everything," answered Miss Pyecroft. Then, turning to the driver, "drive slowly," she said, "to the station. I have allowed sufficient time for you to proceed carefully."

In the whirl of excitement she realised nothing, cared for nothing, thought of nothing but John Carteret—dying, perhaps dead, before she could reach him. And she sank back in the corner of the carriage in a sort of lethargy.

Miss Pyecroft, on the contrary, was in her element. She had undertaken a mission; she was of importance. Things had been rather dull of late at Broadmead, and there had been no special occasion on which she could assert the superior force of the Pyecroft nature. Moreover, she felt an unwonted sentiment of pity for Diana—wherefore she could not imagine unless it were that Miss Pyecroft experienced a certain twinge of self reproach at the possible share which she might have had in bringing matters to their present position. She hoped she had been in no way an accessory, and yet she was not altogether easy in her mind.

So they traveled on.

And Mrs. Seaton sat down, and wrote to her son.

An incoherent letter and not accurate as to facts, though it carried a true impression:—"Mr. Carteret has written to Diana, and she has left Broadmead and gone to him." Later on, it occurred to her to telegraph; but the telegram contained no explanations; it simply said:—"You are wanted at Broadmead at once. Come home."

And, owing to his having wandered away and not returning to his hotel until late the next day, Jasper received the telegram and the letter together.

He started home at once, traveled without stopping and reached Broadmead, pale and haggard, on the evening of the second day after Diana's departure.

"Where is she?" he asked his mother.

"At Marchington. Perhaps this will explain."

And she gave him Diana's letter.

He opened it, but found only his sister's memorandum.

"The ——! Where did she get this? How could I have been so confoundedly careless! It ought to have been destroyed long ago. I should have made it all right without this to remind me. She's had as much and more spent upon her, and all in the end would have been hers."

So he justified himself, in answer to what he knew or thought must be.

"I told her so," said Mrs. Seaton, vaguely, supposing that some allusion to money was made. "Her purse is heavy enough, but she would not take it."

"And she went without money! How could you let her do so, mother?"

"How could I let her go?—the ungrateful, wilful creature! I always said she was a heathen. I believe it now. She's gone; and, thank goodness, she's not coming back again."

Jasper groaned. He laid his head upon his hands, whilst Mrs. Seaton went on vituperating Diana to her heart's content. Her son seemed not to hear her at first; then he suddenly looked up.

"Mother," he said, "be silent. I love her."

Mrs. Seaton paused in surprise. If he had not been her son, her idol, she would have asked:—"Are you such a fool?" As it was, she said:—

"Now? Still! And are you going to Marchington after her?"

"To what end?" he answered, bitterly.

And then a new idea arose.

"Is she alone?"

"No. Miss Pyecroft, of all people, went with her."

"Miss Pyecroft!"

"Yes—Miss Pyecroft accompanies her to see her dying lover," returned Mrs. Seaton, with a slight sneer.

"Dying!"

"Yes—dying or dead, he may be, from the fuss that was made. He may be dead for all I know."

"Dead!" repeated Jasper, a sudden inspiration of hope returning once more. He had triumphed over every obstacle, so far; why not fortune still favor him? If death should come to give him one more chance, he might even yet triumph. "Yes, he would go to Marchington. He ought to go. He was Diana's guardian. He could explain his own way. He had committed no actual fraud. Diana would have her legacy. She had had it already, in one sense. He had no intention of withholding it. And, as for John Carteret, with regard to him, he had only repeated what he had heard. And

To Correspondents.

H. L. F., Washington.—When the rule allowing a base runner to overrun first base was discussed in the convention, before its adoption, it was agreed that it should be so worded as to require the runner, after overrunning the base, to return and re-touch first base before he could legally run for his second. The word "privileged" before only to the last sentence being intended to return to the base after overrunning it, without being liable to be put out, and not as giving him the option of returning to re-touch the base or not prior to running for his second. Any player overrunning first base must return and re-touch the first base before he can legally make his second. The umpire's decision in the case you mention should have required the player to return and touch the base, in which case he could have been readily put out. Of course a player overrunning any other base can run to the next without returning to touch the base he left, as in the latter case he has had no privilege accorded him. In the case of the first base, however, it is different, he being allowed a privilege which is a valuable one, and in case of the error of a dropped or overthrown ball, it would not be fair that the base runner should thereby have a double privilege given him. You are right in regard to the necessity of the player being touched. J. C. W., Oskaloosa, Iowa.—When a high fly ball is struck and a player running the bases runs on such a ball, he can, if he chooses, run to the next base or further, if he thinks there is a chance of the ball being muffed. The "point of play" in case where a base runner is on a base and a high fly is struck to the outer field is to hold to base until the ball is either held or dropped, when, in either case, he can run for the next base. In case of a fly ball being hit to the in-field, it depends upon circumstances whether the point of play be either to hold the base and await the issue of the catch or to run, and risk the risk of the ball being dropped. The base runner, however, has the privilege to run half way or the whole distance between bases on a fly ball struck, if he chooses to run the chance; but it is poor play to do it in five cases out of six.

M. C., Jr., Jersey City.—Your decision was incorrect. When two bases are occupied by base runners, and one player runs to the next base held by the other, and both stand on the base, and—as you state—by a muff of the base player both players are compelled to run to bases, neither can be put out unless they are not standing upon the bases they are entitled to. Had B been touched with the ball while standing on second base, while A still held that base, B would have been out, but, not being so touched, or touched at all, while off the base, A, in the above case, was entitled to return and hold the base he left, under the ordinary circumstances of base running, until he touched the next base, and until he does so cannot be forced to run to the next, except as explained in the rules.

E. O. B., Galesburg, Ill.—The rule governing the question of called balls requires, first, that the umpire shall not call a ball until the ball has passed the home plate; second, that it is delivered over the striker's head must be called in the order of their delivery. In the case you quote, the ball was pitched over the striker's head, and therefore had to be called, whether the striker struck at it or not, and the umpire did right in not calling the ball until it had passed the home plate. The rarer fact of its being caught just as it was called, does not alter the case at all. The ball was properly called, and A is not out on three strikes, and moreover, if the called ball was the third, A was entitled to his base.

CONSTANT READER, Boston.—The time of the Tyne crew in the six mile international race at Lachine, Canada, last year, was 40:59½. St. John, 41:30. The time of the latter crew, when they defeated the Wards at Springfield, in 1868, was 39:28½. In 1867 the Wards pulled over the same course in 39:28, against another St. John crew. Your query is hardly specific enough to enable us to say which has been winning very easily. The best six mile time in this country, however, was pulled by the Paris crew, weighing nearly 100 lbs., and rowed by Robert Fulton, Price, Hutton and McLaren (the latter former being members of the present "Paris" crew), at St. John, N. B., in 1866.

QUICK STEP, Baltimore.—1. The Red Stockings of 1869 were the most thoroughly disciplined and best regulated that ever had entered a ball field up to that date. In 1870 they did not work harmoniously together, and hence were defeated. 2. Creighton was the most finished pitcher known in the annals of the game. 3. The White Stockings were defeated in 1870 in seven games, viz., by the Atlantics, twice; Mutuals, twice; Athletics, twice; Haymakers and Red Stockings, once. In a score of 9 runs to 9 "whitewash" in Ch cago, the nine innings being played.

JOHN MCCARTY, Smithwater, Minn.—1. There are no rules extant in this country for foot racing. Either party has a right to start or run with whatever bottomed shoes as they agree not expressly debarred in the articles. 2. Fanny Ludlow's best time is 1:56 for 1 mile and 1 furlong—rate of 1:43 1-9 to a mile. The fastest even mile time on record is 1:43, by Lon Baldwin and Ed Haines, at Tyler, Tenn., in May last. 3. Bill Lang ran one mile, partly down hill, in 4:32.

UP COUNTRY, Troy.—1. Cannot inform you in regard to the "place of her birth." 2. Kelly (not Joe Kelly, of Boston), Avery and Sumpter, it was beaten by Larkin, Jem Ward and deaf Burke (fatal to Byrne), and fought a draw with Manning. 3. John Gulley beat Gregson (twice), and was beaten by Pearce. He declined the title of champion, as did Goodwin and E. P. Mace, in favor of a match battle with Ben Caunt took place after he (Langham) had defeated Sayers.

CROQUET.—If you were trying to pass your ball through a bridge which you had not passed through on the way to the goal, and it went clean through before striking your opponent's ball, then you can place it by the side of his ball and croquet him, or take another stroke; but if you struck his ball and it was a hard hit, it would upset your opponent, then you must leave the ball where it rebounded to.

C. SMITH, Oshkosh.—Games lost in the professional championship series in the club inning them in case they should tie another club in match series. Thus, if the Mutual and Chicago clubs should be equal in the score of matches won and lost, and the former had won 3 games in excess of the match series, would count against the club losing them.

SUBSCRIBER.—A player running the bases has not only a right to run out of the line between the fielder standing on the line to catch a fly ball, but the rule obliges him to do it in order to avoid obstructing the fielder in his effort to catch the ball. Under any other circumstances of fielding a ball, however, the player must keep within the three feet boundary line if the fielder has the ball in hand.

H. A. D., Albany.—Of course the club having the record of the most "scrubs" won the match in the 11th, but the latter can claim championship honors, no matter how successful, until the championship committee decide legal games. The Haymakers have as yet won but two legal games with the Boston nine, the second, however, having been won on "ratification" only, and one bowcounting, by mutual consent.

WOULD BE SHOWMAN, Chicago, Ill.—You would advise you to abandon the "show business" and "school business" as a money getter, can be learned by hard, actual practice. You might accidentally make money at first, but in the long run we think you would lose. Still, if you persist in trying it, by all means put the matter in the hands of a dramatic agent, several of whose advertisements appear in the CLIPPER.

FAVORITE, Portsmouth, Va.—1. Bell's Life did not state that Longfellow, but his sire Leamington, was bred in England. Longfellow was purchased by his present owner, Mr. John Harper, of Kentucky, out of Naturalb by Brawner's Eclipse. 2. Leamington was imported into this country by Mr. R. W. Cameron, of New York, in 1855. 3. No record. 4. Mr. Harper is a Kentuckian, although born in England.

ARTISEAN, Hagerstown, Md.—1. Enquirer is by Leamington, out of Lida by Lexington; Longfellow by Leamington, out of Nantura by Brawner's Eclipse, and Kingfisher by Lexington, out of Imported Richam Lass by Kingston. 2. The four mile race at Saratoga is on the 22d inst. 3. There is no race pending between Longfellow and Enquirer.

PICARD, Hudson City.—1. Ethan Allen's best time, single, was 2:25; with running mate, 2:18. 2. Flora Temple's best time was 2:19½. 3. R. W. Athen—ul. The Auburn horse is dead. 3. Dexter's 2:17¼ has not been beaten by any of Mr. Bonner's horses.

J. C. L.—It would be impossible for you to get an appearance in this city. Try some travelling club city, or one, say, 30 miles off.

W. H. A.—Yes, an assistant advance agent can command traveling expenses, and from $15 to $40 per week, according to ability.

ORIMALDI.—Prepared French chalk, which you can buy at any drug store, is used by billiard players to chalk their cues.

N. J. PERCIVAL.—The fastest 100 yard time on record is 9½ seconds, by George Seward.

J. N. P., Georgetown, Texas.—There is no recorded or official time on the English turf.

F. H. B., Providence, R. I.—Coventry is a town; so also is Liverpool, Eng.

J. R., Philadelphia.—The government will not, and we certainly do not believe that any one else will.

J. McG., Bradford.—M. Roden drove Lucy against George Wilkes, at Buffalo, last year.

STRAUB, Rochester, N. Y.—Time is needed to judge of your merits.

T. W. H.—Drury Lane bill received—thank you; it will be used.

J. W., Lafayette, Ind.—The advertisement will cost about 75 cents.

PARKER, Toronto.—Mrs. Parton is the name of "Fanny Fern."

S. W. K., Burlington.—The boxer cannot go a blind at poker.

MISS C. C. H., Syracuse, N. Y.—Have written you by mail.

KIT C., Louisville, Ky.—Send it along: it will be cared for.

FIRE FLY, St. Louis, Mo.—The gentleman is not married.

SUBSCRIBER.—Both of the 3 cent pieces are counterfeit.

P. M., Baltimore.—The bet is off.

WASHINGTON.—We prefer Malone.

P. M. S.—Matter of opinion only. Yes.

FRANK F.—See reply to F. M. S.

A CONGRESSIONAL PEDESTRIENNE.—Miss Tennie C. Claflin, the feminine financier, about whom so much has been written and more said, intends stripping for the Congressional race of 1872, on the 8th district track, she having announced her intentions, or made her entry, as turfites would say, before a large number of Germans and several prominent New Yorkers, at Irving Hall, on the evening of the 11th inst., in a forcible speech. Having been duly entered, the Germans promised to back her, and hope to see her come in a length ahead, at least, of all her competitors.

JUDGE DOWLING, after a sojourn in Europe, arrived home on the 11th inst., "looking as well and hearty as ever he looked in his life." Captain Kennedy, who received early intelligence of the Judge's arrival at quarantine, passed the word around, and soon there was quite a delegation to welcome the absentee.

"OUR JIM" was struck the other day, in glancing over the report of a cricket match, at noticing that a certain well known professional player kept "in" the whole afternoon and carried his bat out of the game. After pondering over the matter, the lad has come to the conclusion that the player must be a professional "in"-keeper.

MR. ASHBURY'S new yacht Livonia seems to be as unfortunate as Mr. Bennett's Dauntless, which has not maintained her reputation for speed since her memorable race across the Atlantic eastward.

SCENE IN COURT.—Judge.—"Prisoner, you have been convicted per jury of your own choosing. What have you to say why sentence should not be pronounced?"

Prisoner.—I have only to echo your own words—per-jury of your own choosing!

THE COMING FOUR-MILER.—The sports who put their faith on Longfellow in the approaching four-mile heat race at Saratoga, trust that he will not be a very long fellow on the day.

HAVING HEAD of some of our soldiers being quartered in the Indian territory, "Our Jim" thinks that the poor fellows must feel terribly cut up, and wonders that nobody seems horror-struck at the atrocity.

BALLOON ASCENSIONS are promised this week at Cape May and Narragansett. Are some of the hotel proprietors "going up"?

THE HEIGHT of the season at the summer resorts is over and the tide is now towards home instead of from it.

WE SEE advertised the "Prince of Wales Hat." It is, probably, a species of castor round.

NEWS OF THE WEEK BOILED DOWN.

 A highly important meeting was held at Heidelberg, Germany, on Aug. 6th, to take measures for the foundation of the "Charles Darwin." Delegates were present from various parts of Germany, Austria and Switzerland, and a committee was appointed to draw up a constitution for the new church, which repudiates papal infallibility, and adopts the principles of the Council of Conscience of 1414.

 A tornado did considerable damage in the neighborhood of Winneconna, Wis., on Aug. 7th. A boom was broken on the Wolf river, a fisherman drowned, the steamer Star capsized, and Capt. Geo. Smith drowned. The Catholic church in Granville was also destroyed by the storm.

 Lord Chief Justice Cockburn has been appointed arbitrator for Great Britain, under the treaty of Washington. The Lord Chancellor, assisted by Lord Westerdeen and Prof. Montagne Bernard, will draw up the case for the British Government; and Sir Roundell Palmer will act as counsel before the Board of Arbitration.

 Two men were taken out of the jail at Frankfort, Ky., on the night of Aug. 7th, and hung. One was confined for having committed a rape on Mrs. Fox a few days ago, and the other was the one who fired the first shot in the riot on the previous day.

 Dr. McDonald writes to the Post Office Department that he has completed a convention with the German government for the interchange of postal money orders. The treaty will take effect on Oct. 1st, 1872.

 An accident occurred on the Maine Central Railroad, near Bangor, on Aug. 9th. A train across the Hampden road gave way, precipitating a part of a passenger train on to the road. Two men were killed and thirty wounded.

 A charge of nitro-glycerine was exploded by lightning in the Rock Tunnel, N. H., on Aug. 6th, when two men were instantly killed, and another so seriously injured that he died shortly afterwards.

 A telegram dated London, Eng., Aug. 7th, states that a conflict recently occurred between the Germans and French, at Pontgny, Department of the Jura, in which about twenty citizens were wounded.

 Detective Herrigan found $66,000 of Kansas Pacific Railroad bonds in the woods just outside of St. Louis, Mo., on Aug. 1. They comprised the larger part of the bogiv stolen from the United States Express wagon in that city last month.

 The Pope has declined a throne of gold and the title of the Great, offered him by a London, Eng., committee, and suggests that the money raised be employed in procuring the ordination of students in Catholic seminaries everywhere from military service.

 A fire in the liquor store of Durand and Mayer, corner of Morningstar and Washington streets, Jersey City, took fire on Aug. 9th, and was soon beyond control by an explosion, destroyed property valued at $26,000. One woman was burned to death, and several persons badly wounded.

 A meeting was held in Hyde Park, London, Eng., on Aug. 13th, to protest against the suppression of the Phœnix Park meeting in Dublin, on the previous Sunday. About 2,000 persons assembled, and all passed off quietly.

 George M. Bonacina and his sister, Mrs. Newton, were shot from a Ten hand named Theodore Myers, at their farm on the Platte River, near Denver, Cal., on Aug. 10th. The former is dead and Mrs. Newton will prob bly die.

 A collision occurred between the orange and military at Londonderry, Ireland, on Aug. 12th, and a fight took place between the orangemen and catholics, who were after wards dispersed by the police.

 John Faeberle's soap works and Hummel's morocco dressing works were burned, and several others on John street, Philadelphia, Pa., were damaged by fire, Aug. 10th. Loss, $30,000.

 The referees in the Bennett insurance case, at Rochester, N. Y., have decided that the fire was caused through the connivance of Samuel F. Bennett, one of the claimants, and assessed at $1,159,500,000.

GOVE, N. W.—Ex-Secretary of State of New Hampshire—died of chronic dyspepsia, New Hampshire, Aug. 8th.

GREENWOOD, Richard—The oldest dealer in the hat and fur trade in Portland—Portland, Me., Aug. 9th, aged 74.

DAVIS, The Hon Woodbury—A prominent citizen of Maine, postmaster of Portland, and had been treasurer of that county for about 30 years. He was Judge of the Supreme Judicial Court, which position he resigned in December, 1865, to resume the practice of the law; was early identified with the democratic party, and always an influential member, and one of the founders of the republican party. He formerly contributed many articles upon political and legal subjects to the leading newspapers and magazines in the country—Portland Me., August 9th, aged 67.

LYONS, Capt. William F.—Born in Cork, Ireland, Oct. 8th, 1874; came to this country in 1848, and, in conjunction with Judge Warren, established the Cincinnati Citizen, which he continued to edit till 1856. While in Cincinnati, he entered the state militia of Ohio, and became captain of the Mitchell Light Guard; removed to New York in 1856, and became successor to the Hon. Thomas Francis Meagher, in the Irish News. While here he became otherwise engaged on the press of this city. He wrote the "Life of General Thomas Francis Meagher;" was one of the original fifteen who formed the nucleus of the Knights of St. Patrick, a benevolent organization now firmly established in 1862, and was twice its president—N. Y. city, Aug 9th, aged 47.

LANGLEY, A.—Theatrical manager. See dramatic columns.

MCMAHAN, Hugh—Born in Ireland in 1770, came to this country in 1833 and settled in Montreal, P. E.; afterwards moved to Philadelphia and in 1840 commenced business and rose to prominence—Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 6th, aged 99.

MADDEN, Patrick—Late of Tony Pastor's Opera House. See particulars under sculler department.

O'SULLIVAN, P. D.—A well known Brooklyn politician, and a native of that city. He served for a time in the late war as a lieutenant in one of the regiments of the Irish Legion, and subsequently was appointed to a position in the Navy Yard, which position he retained to the time of his death—Mankato, Minn., Aug. 8th.

OLMSTED, W. S.—Vice-president and treasurer of the Connecticut Mutual Life Insurance Company. The deceased was connected with the company twenty-two years, and five as its secretary—Hartford, Conn., Aug. 12th, aged 68.

ROUND, John C., a member of the sophomore class of Middlebury College—drowned, Middlebury, Vt., Aug. 9.

SPARROW, The Hon. Thomas—died of lock-jaw—Columbus, O., Aug. 7th.

SKENE, Thomas—Formerly a manufacturer of pianos and subsequently a well known undertaker of Philadelphia—Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 4th, aged 67.

SHEBLE, John A.—A well known Philadelphian and at one time the largest importer of hay forks in the United States—Philadelphia, Pa., Aug. 4th, aged 58.

SOMMEILLER, Germano—The great Italian engineer, who, when a boy, projected and advocated the Mont Cenis Tunnel; born at St. Michel, Savoy, in 1815, entered the Polytechnic School, at Turin, in his fifteenth year, and after a four years' course of studies graduated at the head of his class. Completing his studies he traveled for a couple of years through Western Europe, visiting Italy and and Germany, and on his return home he published a pamphlet suggesting to the government of King Carlo Alberto, of Sardinia, the project of piercing the Alps with a railway tunnel under Mont Cenis might be constructed. After twenty years of incessant agitation of this stupendous work, he received the appointment of director of the same. To him the world is indebted for the invention of the ingenious machine which the tunnelling processes required. It is said that but a few weeks before his death he solved the difficult problem of the proper ventilation of the great tunnel—died at his home in the Savoy mountains, Italy, during the night of Aug. 14th.

TANCEY, Catharine—Widow of the late Hon. Isaac Tancey, formerly Secretary of the Navy. The deceased was taken ill in church, and died in her carriage on the way home—Hartford, Conn., Aug. 7th.

TRICKLER, Dr. William H.—A graduate of Trinity College, Dublin, Ireland, and a resident of this city. On Aug. 12th, while getting off a car on Third avenue, he fell, and one wheel passed over and severed his left leg. He was removed to Bellevue Hospital, where he died, Aug. 13th, aged 23.

VERHOFF, Heinrich C.—Harpist. Particulars in foreign news department.

VARICK, Dr. Richard A.—For forty years a physician of Poughkeepsie—found dead in his bed, Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Aug. 10th.

VALLANDIGHAM, Mrs.—Widow of the late Hon. C. L. Vallandigham, who accidentally shot and killed himself while illustrating a murder case at Lebanon, O., in June last—died from the effects of grief at her husband's death—Cumberland, Md., Aug. 15th.

WARNER, Edith Mary—The daughter of the poet Southey, and wife of the Rev. John Wood Warter, B. D., rector of West Tarring. The deceased was the daughter of Southey's first wife, and was born in 1805—England, about July 21st, aged 66.

THE RING.

ARREST OF MIKE COBURN AND JOHNNY SAUNDERS FOR ASSAULT.

Shortly before midnight on Monday, Aug. 7th, an assault was committed upon a man named Charles Brunner, residing at No. 236 East Forty-seventh street, he being badly beaten about the face and body and seriously stabbed. In answer to his cries a couple of policemen arrived on the scene after the flight of the assailants. He was carried into his house and medical attendance summoned. He stated that the assault was committed by Mike Coburn and John Saunders, who were taken into custody early the following morning. Coburn admitted that he beat Brunner, because the latter stigmatised him as a thief, but said that Saunders had nothing to do with the affray whatever and that some person to him unknown had stabbed him. Saunders likewise stoutly maintained his entire innocence, saying that he had not even been in 47th street since the evening of the 8th inst. They were taken into the presence of the wounded man, Coroner Herman being summoned, and the ante-mortem statement of the supposed dying man taken. Brunner stated that he was seated on a cool-box in front of his residence, smoking, when Coburn and Saunders came along, and he opened a conversation with them. Some time previous, it appears, a watch had been stolen from a brother-in-law of his, for which Coburn and Saunders had been arrested but discharged, there appearing no positive evidence against them. Brunner alluded thereto, expressing the belief that they were the guilty parties. This incensed Coburn, who, as he alleges, pulled him from the box and beat and kicked him, while Saunders drew a knife and plunged it in his side twice, inflicting wounds of a dangerous nature. The prisoners were thereupon remanded to the Tombs. They are still confined there, and the wounded man will probably recover.

THE GLOVES IN MASSACHUSETTS.—Fred. Corbin and Mike Ford took a joint benefit at Martin's Hall, North Adams, Mass., on Saturday, Aug. 5th, to a good house. Volunteers were plentiful, the following encounters being the most noteworthy:—Cumber and Williams, Mulligan and Fox, Smith and Atwood, Savage and Maloney (a regular glove fight), Fitzgerald, of Hoosick Falls, and Harrigan; McGrath, of Hoosick Falls, and Black, of Adams (very exc ting); Cumber and Sullivan, and Sheehan and Gould. Jerry Cumber's and Cochlyn's songs, Frank Carney's clog dancing, and Corbin's Indian club act were well received, and the wind-up in ring costume between Fred. Corbin and Mike Ford was applauded.

GEORGE SEDDONS and Arthur Chambers are to give three exhibitions at St. John, N. B., on the 21st, 22d and 23d inst., respectively. The entertainments will be given at Paddock's Buildings, Prince William street, and the chief feature will be the wind-up between the beneficiaries.

MISS LOTTIE SEDDONS, sister to George, has, we learn, been joined in vaudeville's bonds to Mr. J. Lawrence, of the far west, and have taken their departure for California.

WE HAVE LETTERS for Joe Coburn, Arthur Chambers, Wm. Edwards, Owney Geoghegan and John Oddy.

AQUATICS.

THE APPROACHING GREAT RACES.

THE FOUR-OARED MATCH AT ST. JOHN AND THE INTERNATIONAL CHAMPIONSHIP REGATTAS AT HALIFAX AND SARATOGA.

The present year is one which will be long remembered by boating men and the admirers of the healthful exercise of which they are exponents, for it is, with scarce of paramount importance to the citizens of both hemispheres. Thus far the season and been unproductive of anything of more than local interest among the professional oarsmen, but the future is bright with promises we being now upon the eve of a trio of events which may justly be termed the most important and of any that have ever been projected upon this side of the Atlantic. First comes the race, over a six mile course, between the famous Paris crew, of St. John, N. B., champions of North America, and the four who have come all the way from Newcastle-on-Tyne, England, to meet them, embracing the present champion of that country, James Renforth (and the celebrated ex-champion sculler, Harry Kelley, who, after making defeat of "Jimmy" Hamill will accept no forgiven). The race will be for a stake of $500 a side in hard gold, and will be decided upon the Kennebeccasis river, near St. John, over a properly surveyed course, on Wednesday, August 23d. This contest will be a sequel to the race at Lachine, Canada, in September, 1870, between the St. John four and the then champion crew of England, composed of Renforth, Taylor, Winship and Martin, in which the latter were successful, thereby gaining the proud distinction of "Champions of the World." The Paris crew and their supporters attributed the result to the roughness of the water, which, they affirmed, interfered greatly with them, but scarcely at all with their opponents, owing to the fact that the boat rowed by the latter was built to provide against such an emergency, while that of the St. John oarsmen was totally unfit for anything but the smoothest water. They made overtures for another race, but nothing came of it, definite action being deferred until it was too late. A challenge was subsequently sent to the victorious four by Robert Fulton on behalf of the New Brunswick men (the being stroke-oar of the crew), but as Renforth had severed his connection with the champion four, it could not be accepted. Henforth, however, wrote to Fulton, saying that if he was allowed to select his own crew he would accept a challenge upon the terms mentioned. Finding that it was impossible to again have the pleasure of rowing against the same crew which defeated them on the St. Lawrence—though not, they stoutly maintained, upon their merits—Fulton and his associates determined to try conclusions against any four that England could produce, believing that a better quartet than that sent against them last season could not be got together, at all events. Both crews have been in constant training ever since the match was a settled fact, and that each is in magnificent fix at the present time advices from their respective headquarters assure us. The general opinion is that the Tyne and Thames four are certain to carry off the honors, but there is no sufficient reason, that we can perceive, for being so positive concerning the issue. The lesson taught the St. John men in Canada has not been lost upon them, and with all the experience they have had in the past, and their known excellence as wielders of the spruces, combined with the knowledge to be gained, it is not unreasonable to suppose that they would again risk their reputation, nor their backers so much money, unless they had cause to repose confidence in their ability to win the day. We do not believe the crew which is to row against them on the 23d inst. is any better, if as formidable, than that stroked by Renforth (the best man in both) on the St. Lawrence, and if our belief is well founded, then we have little fear that the men of Brunswick will not be entitled to the credit of the championship, which is very necessary after a journey of several days and nights by land and water. Coulter is looked upon as the champion sculler of America, and has been prominently before the public for several years, while the name of the Biglins is known throughout the land, they having been members of the old champion four-oared crew of this country which, in 1860, marked down the fastest time on record for five miles, viz :—30 min. 44¾ sec., with a turn. Though that is now nigh eleven years ago, the strength of these tall, powerful, large-boned and spare athletes seems unimpaired by the lapse of time, and they can feather the blades with all that skill which then gained them celebrity. Though having had, comparatively speaking, but a brief period in which to their training, they have, by hard work, reduced themselves very well already, and are disposed to think that, whether they win or lose, they will, if naught untoward occurs, "knock spots" out of the best time which has ever yet been made in a six mile race. The Nova Scotia crews are made up of men known only locally, to whom we can do no more than simply advert. The offering of a special prize of $250 has, however, stimulated them to unusual exertions, and, before long we are some people in Nova Scotia who are hopeful that one or the other will "astonish the natives," as well as the "outside barbarians," by sweeping across the line in advance of all competitors. For the second grand fixture, the single scull race, it is probable that there will be six entries—perhaps more. Those in our mind's eye are James Renforth and John Bright, of the Paris crew; Sadler, Ragnall and Frank Kelley, of the second; and Henry Coulter. It may be that Kelley, and perchance one or two of the Paris crew, will take a hand in, also. Our representative has exhibited a strong desire to try conclusions with the English champion, who is regarded as altogether invincible by the would-be knowing ones, and having failed to secure a meeting last year, though he offered sufficient inducement, he has resolved to accomplish his object now. Charley Elliott has built him a boat for that special object. This regatta is in "everybody's mouth," and thousands are preparing to journey to Halifax to witness the promised exciting struggles for supremacy between the oarsmen of the Old and New World. A telegram from that city, dated Aug. 10th, states that the manager of the Windsor and Annapolis Railway says that at least 7,000 persons from the States and elsewhere will go by that line.

Third upon the list, but equally important, is the grand aquatic jubilee which is arranged to take place upon the bosom of Saratoga Lake during the early part of next month, for prizes amounting in the aggregate to $5,500, and which, it is confidently anticipated, will bring into opposition all the crews who meet at Halifax, except those belonging to Nova Scotia; besides them, too, we shall have another chance to see the Ward brothers propel their new shell on the occasion, as likewise the McKee crew, of Pittsburgh, who won the first prize at the Buffalo regatta, with ease, in very good time. The re-appearance of the Wards, particularly in such a race as this, will be hailed with much gratification and add not a little to the interest taken in the contest, great though it would otherwise be. Then, too, we shall be afforded an opportunity of seeing the relative powers of the rival American crews put to the test, and have proven beyond question which is most deserving of the title of champions. Until last week the arrangements for this regatta were enveloped in mystery, and there appeared no certainty of its coming off at all. By the subjoined notice, however, it will be observed that everything has been settled in regard to it:—

SARATOGA SPRINGS, Aug. 8th, 1871.

EDITOR NEW YORK CLIPPER.—DEAR SIR.—Will you do me the favor to publish the notice I herewith hand you. The grand regatta to take place at Saratoga Lake, Sept. 9th and 11th, 1871; four-oared race, open to the world, four miles, around a stake-boat; each party to row in their own boat; the winner of the race to get $2,000, the second $1,250 and the third $750. Also, a single scull race, same distance, open to the world; each party to row in their own boat; the winner to get $1,000 and the second $500. The referee to have power to postpone in case of bad weather. All entries must be made by the first day of September. Persons wishing to enter will please address the undersigned, at Saratoga Springs, New York. No entrance money charged. JOHN MORRISSEY.

P. S.—I am in receipt of a telegram from the Tyne crew, of England, saying that they will enter. J. M.

As the season at this fashionable watering place will be at its height at the time mentioned, the selection of date is a happy one, and that there will be an immense throng present to see the sport there is no doubt, this being the first event of the character which has ever taken place upon our waters. The premiums offered are very liberal indeed, and those who have projected the carnival are deserving of every encouragement.

The Wards commenced active training about a week since, at Josh Ward's, Cornwall, on the Hudson, and are practicing twice a day, and going through the usual dieting and pedestrianism necessary to get them in thorough and perfect condition. Enjoying the experience they do, it is only fair to suppose that they will soon be able to row into line in as good condition as it is possible for oarsmen to arrive at. The crew will consist of Hank Ward, stroke; Josh Ward, No. 2; Gilbert Ward, No. 3; and Ellis Ward, bow. They are now rowing in the old four-oared shell, Floyd T. Field, built by George W. Shaw, of Newburg; but the shell in which they will probably row races in was sent up to Cornwall on Saturday, the 12th inst. This boat is a fine specimen of the handicraft of George Reahr, and weighs but eighty pounds. She is built of Spanish Cedar, is forty-four feet long, eighteen inches wide and eight inches deep.

On the 12th inst., we paid a visit to the Coulter-Biglin-Kaye crew, at their training quarters, the Knickerbocker Hotel, located on 125th street, a short distance from the Harlem River. Seated on the portico we found that tall New Yorker, John Lawrence, a staunch friend of the crew and thorough sporting man, perusing a newspaper, while, standing inside the door, leaning carelessly against the jamb was the champion sculler, and stroke oar of the crew, Henry Coulter, his sun-embrowned and athletic looking as an Indian brave. He presented quite a contrast to his appearance upon his arrival here from Pittsburgh, having reduced himself about twenty-eight pounds since then. He welcomed us cordially, his pleasant face imparting up with a genial smile as he "closed on" our dexter "shaker" with a vise-like grip, probably imagining it was the handle of an oar. The remainder of the crew were at dinner, but quickly made their appearance, as likewise did Bill Gannon, of the Quakers, who by request occupied Kaye's seat in the boat for that day, the latter having cut his leg slightly. All looked exceedingly well, and assured us they felt so, too there was not such a risk of collision as Rule 7 contemplates. Both prizes for time and by allowance fell to the same boat in all four classes. Lida in the schooners, Peerless in the first-class sloops, Orion in the second class, and Anna in the third class. The contestants passed the home flag-boat as follows:—

Boats.	Start.	Finish.	Hours.	Min.	Sec.	Allowance.	Corrected time.

SAILING REGATTA AT GREENVILLE, N. J.

A regatta, for yachts of twenty-eight feet and less in class, for a purse of $75, in gold, and for those of twenty-three feet and under, for a prize of $40, was sailed over Taylor's "Idle Hour," at the above named Jersey borough, on Thursday, August 10th. The entries were:—

Name.	Captain.	Length.
FIRST CLASS.
George M. Sherman	John G. Gage	28ft. 7in.
William T. Lee	Henry Smedley	27 6
SECOND CLASS.
Ada	Wesley	23 7
Drake (not rigged)	Drake	22 4
Idle Hour	Robert Ellsworth	22 4
Sophia V	William H. Ellsworth	22 4
Brogan	Ed. Ketcham	20 0

The course was from off the dock at Greenville, up the bay to a stake-boat off Caven Point, thence to a stake-boat off Constable Point, the course to be sailed over three times, making a distance of twenty miles. Time allowance two minutes to the foot. The start was made shortly after 3 P. M., the breeze blowing light from the southwest. The race to the first stake-boat was well contested, the squadron keeping well together; after turning Constable Point the Sherman took the lead of the Lee, and the Drake was first of the second class boats. As the yachts sailed the last round the Sherman passed Constable Point three minutes ahead of the Lee, and the Sophia V. and Ada were in advance of the second class, followed by Drake, Idle Hour and Brogan. During the latter part of the race the breeze died almost away, and the contest became a mere drift. The Sherman came home more than five minutes ahead of the William T. Lee, and won the first prize over and above the time allowance she had to give her competitor. The Sophia V came in out of sight ahead of her rival's, and was the only boat in her class timed. Summary:—

Name.	Start.	Finish.	Hours.	Min.	Sec.
William T. Lee	3h.	15m.	0s.	6h.	0m. 30s.
George E. Sherman	3	15	30	5	55 15
Ada	3	36	40
Drake	3	17	0	Not timed.
Idle Hour	3	17	30	Not timed.
Sophia V	3	19	15	Not timed.
Brogan	3	20	0	6	30 10
Ada	3	11	21	Not timed.

REGATTA ON THE DELAWARE.

Quite an interesting yacht race came off on the Delaware on the 7th inst., starting from Poplar street wharf, Philadelphia, and rounding the buoy off upper spit at Chester Island and return, a distance of 30 miles. The following boats entered:—1st class—Joseph Soloman, 19 ft, Capt. Jacob Vloe; Ella Forbes, 19 ft, Capt. John Forbes; L. B. Dolby, 20 ft 6 in., Capt. Henry Vandershier; Lonise, 20 ft, Capt. Smith; Myers, 19 ft, Capt. John Rutter. 2d class—Surprise, 17 ft, Capt. Wm. Rock; Harry Maul, 16ft 6in, Capt. Jos. Wood; Lilly, 16 ft, Capt. Wm. Baker; H. M. Coolidge, 17 ft, Capt. S. Liggett; W. Eckenbrim, 18 ft, Capt. A. Gerord, and H. Clay Funk, 16 ft, Capt. R. G. Wilkins. The boats got off in good style, the wind being light from southwest, the Eckenbrim taking the lead, closely followed by the Maul, the balance of the fleet in a bunch. Off the club-house at Coopers Point, the Funk, after working her way through the fleet, took the lead, receiving hearty salutes from mouth and gun from the "Pompers." This she kept throughout the race, turning the lower buoy off the spit 9½ minutes ahead of the Eckenbrim, 2d boat, the balance of the fleet well in the distance. On the home-stretch the Funk showed her sailing qualities, and arrived at the flag boat six minutes ahead of the Dolby, first boat in her class. The prizes were then awarded as follows:—First class, a splendid silk champion flag; second class, a massive silver pitcher. So again the two champions have been victorious, and Wednesday each boat, flying their champion flags, sailed around the harbor, making a very fine display, amid the booming of cannon. R. G. Wilkins, owner of the Funk, offers to sail any boat of her length in the states. Also, by applying to Peter Glazier, any boat of the Dolby's length can be accommodated. The winning boats made the run inside of five hours—very creditable, considering the very baffling winds that prevailed throughout the race. A correspondent says:—"The Funk, in passing by Smith's Island on the way down, had some difficulty in "winding" an old cow, handled by Messrs. Weaver and Vandersilce, that had doubtless taken to the water to see the race. Capt. Weaver understands a tiller better than a cow's tail."

AMATEUR SWIMMING CHAMPIONSHIP.

The third contest for the first prize ever offered for the amateur championship of swimming in England, with very handsome silver medal for first and second, took place in the Thames on Saturday, July 22d, under the auspices of the Metropolitan Association. The course was one mile and six furlongs, from Putney Aqueduct to Hammersmith Bridge. In 1869 T. Morris was the winner, when he joined the professional ranks; the next year Parker won, and again he was successful on Saturday should he win in 1872 he will become final possessor of the trophy. On this occasion there were eight entries, but only five competed, J. Wilson, of Leeds, a pupil of Peter Johnson, being made first favorite. The time for starting was fixed at 5.30, but it was a quarter to 4 o'clock before they were sent away by Mr. James Cole, of the North London Club, from a flat moored in the second arch of the aqueduct. Five competitors made their appearance, viz:—H. Parker, Alliance and London clubs; F. Wilson, Leeds Amateur Club; G. Cole, North London Club; W. H. Bell, East London Club; D. Ainsworth, Serpentine Club.

At the word "go!" Cole, who was at the Surrey station, got slightly the best of the start and was soon leading by a yard, his immediate follower being Parker, swimming on his extreme left, the others strike in-line, for the Duke's Head Parker had gone to the front and was leading Wilson by nearly a couple of yards, the next to him being Ainsworth, Cole fourth and Bell last. At the London Boathouse Parker was three yards before Wilson, both swimming at a great pace, and thus early leaving the rest of the competitors far behind. Between this and the Point Wilson got on better legs with Parker, who was being steered a splendid course by Ralph Wandsworth; but the Leeds man, who had raised the hopes of his friends for a short time, fell away again. By the time they arrived off Rose Cottage the race was all over, as Parker, whom we never saw swim in better form, was nearly 30 yards in front of Wilson, and Ainsworth was a similar distance in his rear. Crossing over towards the Soap Works, Parker kept on increasing his lead, when he was about 50 yards in front and going still further away, and won the fastest race that has ever been swum for this prize, in 24min. 35sec., beating Wilson by 43sec., or about 80 yards. Cole, who had gone into third place on the retirement of Ainsworth at the Crab Tree, being a similar distance in the Leeds winner's rear. Bell gave up off Rose Bank. Mr. Leverell officiated as umpire.

WOONSIMMET BOAT CLUB.—On Saturday afternoon, Aug. 9th, the fourth annual regatta of this Chelsea, Mass., Club, was held on Chelsea Creek, over a course of one and three-quarter miles in length, with one turn. The first race was for single scull shells, for the champion cup, valued at $100. It was inscribed with a monogram of the club, and the following explanation of previous holders:—"Won by W. F. Lowe, Sept., 1868; W. R. Bagnall, Jr., July 30th, 1869; W. R. Bagnall, Jr., Aug. 6th, 1870." Bagnall having held it two years against all competitors in the club, the cup was to become his property if he was successful in the race of Saturday. The judges were F. W. Snow and W. F. Spring at the starting point, near Meridian street bridge, and A. J. Clement at the stake-boat. The entries for this race were as follows:—Cherub, W. R. Bagnall, Jr., manata; Mr. Bell, G. Whittemore, boat, Kill Ward, J. F. Perkins, white. The start was made at 3.06:13½ P. M., and was very even. Perkins had the inside, with Whittemore next, and Bagnall on the outside. Perkins did not pull more than a hundred strokes before his competitors shot away, and he have up and soon returned. The others went along side by side, pulling 42 strokes a minute for the first two minutes, when they slackened to about 38. Then Whittemore settled down to about 37, and Bagnall increased to 39 and 40, which he held well up to the stake-boat, but did not gain much on his competitor, who turned close after him. On the return, however, Bagnall pulled rapidly away, the rough water operating most to the disadvantage of Whittemore. Bagnall won the race in 14:35½, beating Whittemore just two minutes. The former now holds the champion cup as his exclusive property. The next race was for single scull lapstreaks, the same distance being rowed. The entries were R. A. Fellon in the "Nellie," and S. Atwood in the "Josie." The time made was 15:54 by Fellows, who won the race, and 16:01 by Atwood.

THE ATALANTA BOAT CLUB.—On Tuesday, the 8th inst., this club held their first regular meeting since their return from their races in New England waters. Arrangements were made for the club's annual regatta which will come off on the Passaic, near Newark, on Saturday, September 9th. There will be three races, each over a two mile course, with a turn. Vote of thanks were tendered the Springfield Club, for their kirish hospitality to the members during their sojourn in Springfield, and also to individuals for various courtesies. The business part of the meeting through with, the champion crew were the recipients of substantial tokens of regard from the club. Doctor Withers, the stroke oarsman of the racing crew, was presented with an elegant imported watch and chain, valued at $300. Ransom Parker, Jr., the president of the club, made the presentation, and the doctor replied in appropriate terms. Leander Waterbury and Alexander Handy were presented with a diamond scarf pin, each valued at $150. Charles A. Peverelly made the presentation remarks, to which Handy and Waterbury made replies. The remainder of the crew, Theodore Van Raden, Henry S. Le Roy and Edward Smith, had received sailsuits and appropriate testimonials from the club soon after the conclusion of the Yale contests. The last token of the club's appreciation was a beautiful photograph of the Atalanta's champion six in rowing garb, superbly colored, measuring 24 by 19 inches, and with a massive and tasty frame, which was presented by vice president W. H. Webster to Charles A. Peverelly.

ROYAL VICTORIA YACHT CLUB—MR. ASHBURY ALTERS HIS MIND AGAIN.—A cable dispatch dated, London, Aug. 12th, says that on the fourth day of the regatta of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, 11th inst., the race for the Town Cup, a piece of plate, value £100, presented by the inhabitants of the town of Ryde, Isle of Wight, for the first yacht in, was won by Major Thorp's yawl Gertrude, of the Royal New Thames Club. T. Houldsworth's cutter Gertrude, of the Royal Victoria Club, was the second yacht in, winning the prize of £40, presented by the Royal Victoria Club. The course was the same one round the Isle of Wight. The Livonia was one of the contestants, and was the sixth yacht in, winning the second prize. After the race the Livonia went into dock for further alterations. As is now asserted tout Commodore Ashbury has, in consequence of the Livonia's second victory over the schooner Egeria, reconsidered his determination not to send the Livonia to New York as the contestant for the Queen's Cup. While she is in dock her keel will be materially altered. Her spars will be subsequently reduced and she will sail on or about the 1st of September for New York.

GULICK VS. ATALANTA.—The Gulick Club have issued a pronunciamento, asserting their claim to the title of amateur champions, and basing the same upon their victory over the Atalanta in the last annual regatta of the Hudson Amateur Association. They also claim the right of the Amateur to the title they assume, because of their victory over two college clubs, and declare themselves ready to defend the champion flag now in their (the Gulick's) possession against any amateur crew in the country. As both clubs claim the championship of different waters, we leave the settlement of the matter by rowing for it afraid? To hold the championship, a crew must row in all comers, upon equitable terms and if either the Atalantas or Gulicks decline to engage in such a race within a reasonable length of time, the championship is forfeited to the remaining club.

NORTH OF ENGLAND REGATTA.—On July 31st and Aug. 1st, the above regatta was held at Scotswood, near Newcastle, on the Tyne, Eng. The most important events were the four-oared race (or the Tyne Stakes, value £25, in three prizes, 1¼ miles, in which the Middlesex crew won with the greatest ease by any number of lengths. This crew is composed of James Taylor, stroke; H. Shidlar, Robert Bagnall and Thomas Winskie, and is entered for the Halifax regatta. The next event of special interest was the four-oared Stakes, value £25, in three prizes, for single scull boats, same course. Joe Sadler won, half a length before Taylor, who was the distance in front of Bagnall. The latter having started off with the lead and held it until the Suspension Bridge was reached.

HILES WARD AND T. J. O'LEARY.—This is the most important single scull match now on the docket in the states, and, though it is overshadowed by the coming events on the Passaic, Harlem and Saratoga (with the second of which it unfortunately conflicts), yet it excites a deep interest among boating men and others thereabouts, as a rule. It is to come off on Lake Quinsigamond, these fellows distant from the course, Ward, on the 30th of the present month, over a three mile course, with one turn, and for the stake's sum, Ward being allowed $30 for expenses. Since the match was entered into both men have been training, O'Leary on Lake Quinsigamond, with Tom Dillon as mentor, and Ward at Cornwall, on the Hudson, taking exercise both in his shell and along with Jack, Hank and Gil in the four-oar boat. The sentiments of each man speak very confidently as to the result—in fact, both sides call upon it as a "sure thing" for their man, and which will be disappointed remains to be seen when they meet. From all appearances, the contest will be a close and exciting one.

THE BROOKLYN YACHT CLUB.—A special meeting of this club was held on Saturday evening, 12th inst., at their rooms, 26 Court street, Vice-Commodore John S. Dickinson presiding in the absence of Commodore Jacob Voorhis, Jr. The club will start on its annual cruise on Aug. 23d, and as nearly every yacht owner in the squadron has signified his intention to be at the rendezvous, it will without doubt prove the most successful cruise ever inaugurated by the club. The following notice has been issued to the members:—

BROOKLYN YACHT CLUB, 26 COURT STREET, August 14, 1871.

SIR.—The Brooklyn Yacht Club squadron will rendezvous at Glen Cove on Tuesday, Aug 22d, and proceed eastward on their cruise after the arrival of the steamboat from Hallett's Cove. The regatta at New London will be on Friday, the 25th inst.

By order JAMES VOORHIS, Jr., Commodore.

WILLIAM T. LEE, Secretary.

SHELL VS. SIX-OARED BOAT RACE.—On the evening of the 10th inst., a two and a half mile race was pulled at New Hamburgh, N. Y., between Henry E. Lee, in his shell, against John Lacey, J. C. Curtis and W. A. Lawson, in a six-oared working boat. The time given being 19 minutes, the shell won by twenty lengths, the time given being 15 min. 15 sec.

FIFTEEN YACHTS, of the Eastern Club, joined the cruising squadron of the New York Club at Mimo's Ledge Light, on the morning of Aug. 11th, and proceeded together to Boston harbor, anchoring in the Quarantine grounds at noon. A grand dinner was given by the Eastern Club to the visitors on the day following, and the regatta was fixed for August 16th.

DOGGETT'S COAT AND BADGE.—This waterman's race, one of the most interesting annual events in England, was rowed on Aug. 1st over the usual course—from the Old Swan at London Bridge to the Old Ferry at Chelsea—there being six starters, of which Thomas J. MacKinney, of Richmond, proved the victor.

A YACHT RACE took place at Portsmouth, N. H., on Aug. 9th, between the Rev. George H. Hepworth's Ida and William Dixon's Bismarck, the course being from that place to the Isle of Shoals and return, a distance of 24 miles. The Ida won in 4 hours and 7 minutes, beating the Bismarck 32 minutes.

ROYAL HALIFAX YACHT CLUB.—The annual race for the Prince of Wales' challenge cup took place in the harbor, Halifax, N. S., on Tuesday, Aug. 8d, the entries being as follows:—Cloud, Kate, Whisper, Falcon, Nymphia and Spray. The Nymphia won, being closely pursued by the Whisper.

FISHER ISLAND CHAMPIONSHIP.—The owner of the new yacht Khediva, Mr. H. A. Mott, has issued a challenge to the owner of the present champion yacht Twilight, Mr. M. W. Bacon, clerk of the steamboat City of Boston, for a race for the above named championship, to take place on the 18th inst.; distance twenty-five miles.

THE LIVONIA A FAILURE.—The recent defeats sustained by Mr. Ashbury's yacht Livonia have had the effect, as we learn from a cable dispatch, of deciding him to substitute the Cambria for her in the proposed race for the Queen's Cup upon our waters.

A RACE for $225 came off at Toledo, O., on Aug. 3d, between the yachts Nomad, Minnie and Kelsey, over a twenty mile course. The first named took the lead at the start, kept it all through, and won by 15 minutes, Kelsey second.

FROM FORTRESS MONROE, VA., a telegram announces that the Farragut Boy Club, of Philadelphia, arrived there on the 11th inst., in their schooner yacht, Mayhew. They were to leave on the 13th for Cox's Island and Cape May, en route for home.

HOW ABOUT the next regatta of the Hudson Amateur Rowing Association? If such an event is to take place this year it is about time crews proposing to participate entered upon a course of training.

A BOAT RACE, distance 2¼ miles, took place at Washington, D. C., on Aug. 12th, the four-oared shell of the Arlington Club defeating the six-oared gig of the same organization by thirty seconds.

THE LIVONIA defeated the Egeria in the race for the Vice Commodore's prize at the regatta of the Royal Victoria Yacht Club, England, Aug 8th.

THE ANNUAL CRUISE of the Brooklyn Yacht Club is to commence on the 24th inst., and the vessels taking part are to rendezvous at Glen Cove the previous day.

BASE BALL.

ATHLETIC vs. ATLANTIC.

These Brooklyn clubs played a lively game together on August 14th, on the Capitoline grounds, the contest occupying but a little over an hour. There was some very fine play on both sides, and the contest was quite interesting, as will be seen by the score:—

MUTUAL vs. ATHLETIC.

The contest between the Mutuals and the Brooklyn Athletics, played on the Capitoline ground, Aug. 12th, resulted in quite a good game, the Mutuals having considerable trouble to defeat their opponents by a score of 14 to 8. Fleet, who has played in the Tony Pastor, Fly Away and Atlantic Club nines this season, played on the Mutual nine; but he cannot legally play until October. The score:—

ATHLETIC VS. OLYMPIC.—A correspondent from Philadelphia criticizes the report of the above named match at Washington which appeared in the CLIPPER of last week. He says:—"In the first place, the collision between Force and Cuthbert was purely accidental, and could not be avoided by the latter as Force was almost directly on the path leading to third base, and as Cuthbert had the right of way, it was, if anything, an obstruction on the part of Force. None but a few prejudiced partisans of the Washington club manifested their disapprobation. For the benefit of this gentleman, Mr. L. G. Martin, the umpire on the day in question, and many prominent citizens of Washington, Baltimore, and Philadelphia will vouch. In the second place, instead of the eighth innings of the Athletics being played in a storm of dust, it was the eighth innings of the Olympics, who went first to the bat, that was so played, and while the Athletics were at the bat the dust had ceased, and a slight mist fell for two or three minutes, when the umpire called time, and as the Olympics were in no hurry to finish the innings, after waiting ten minutes, a heavy shower obliged the umpire to call the game. In the third place, according to Section 2, of Rule 7, the Athletics having exceeded the score of their opponents in their innings, played another, won by a score of 24 to 8, in eight innings, instead of 16 to 5 in seven innings, as your correspondent mistakenly states."

LIVE OAK VS. SPRING HILL.—The Spring Hill (Ohio) Club visited Cincinnati on the 5th, and encountered the Live Oaks, of that city. Having beaten the Cincinnati amateurs the previous week, it was thought they would give the Live Oak party a hard struggle, but after the second innings the Cincinnati club had it all its own way. It was a game of heavy batting and loose fielding the Live Oaks making thirty-four runs, and their adversaries eight. The score of innings was as follows:—

Innings.	1st	2d	3d	4th	5th	6th	7th	8th	9th
Live Oaks	0	9	6	5	1	7	4	2	0—34
Spring Hill	3	0	1	1	0	0	1	1	1—8

CUPID'S FOIBLES, FOLLIES AND FANCIES.

LOVE'S IMPATIENCE.

WRITTEN FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

"Hark ye, oh, brown bronzed mariner,
From over the stormy sea,
Still the wild throbbing of my brain,
And truly answer me.
What was the message my lover sent
To his own sweetheart by you?
Answer me, answer me, sailor man,
Answer me honest and true!

"Did he charge you, sailor, to say to me
How weary the long hours passed,
That every moment would seem a year
Till he held me hard and fast;
That he thought of me through the live long day,
And saw me in dreams by night,
That he sighed and longed for the wings of the dove
That to me he might take flight?

"Oh, wicked and drear is the cruel fate
That keeps us so wide apart;
Would he were here, so I might fold
Him close to my loving heart!
Speak! answer me true, oh, sailor man,
Braved by the wind and wave,
Dearest and truest of lovers is he!
What was the message he gave?"

"Was this fellar of yours a tall young man, Light hair, and an eye of blue?"
"Yes; in all the world there is none like him,
Brave and honest and true;
His voice is like the song of a bird,
Knew him but to adore him—"
"Well, marm, to the best o' my belief
I think I never saw him!"

A FATAL LEAP.

SAD FATE OF AN UNFORTUNATE LASS.

A fearful tragedy occurred in the Falls Field last night about ten o'clock, by which a girl fifteen years of age, named Viola Karshner, whose father, a tailor by occupation, John Karshner, resides at No. 47 Magne street, in the Eleventh ward, was instantly killed. The St. Paul's Evangelical Church Society were holding a festival at the garden, and there was an immense crowd in attendance. The members of the society and their friends were enjoying themselves, and nothing occurred to mar the festivities except the conduct of roughs and rowdies who force themselves into all such occasions and particularly into those held at the Falls Field Gardens, which are kept by a man named Fred. Fach. There were only two or three policemen present, and they did their best to preserve order, but were comparatively powerless. We have it on good authority that a number of roughs committed acts there which would jus tify resort to Lynch law. The Church Society are in no wise to blame for the conduct of the roughs.

Viola Karshner, the girl who met with such a terrible fate, went to the festival with some neighboring girls. While in the building where the organ is, she was invited by a young man, whose name is not known, to walk with him on the river bank. As they were going north toward the alley, or lane, which runs from St. Paul street to the river bank, they were observed by three or four young men, Richard Buckley, Patrick Garrity, John Farrell and William Coakley, who, suspecting that something was wrong, followed them. Garrity was the first to observe the girl and her male companion in an act of criminality, but was afraid to say anything, fearing that he might get into trouble if he did. At this time Buckley came up and spoke to the young man with the girl. The conversation between them it is unnecessary to repeat. Buckley caught the girl by the sleeve of her dress and inquired of her what she was doing in such a place. She pulled away from him and jumped towards the edge of the bank, but he caught her and placed her on her feet, telling her to be careful or she would go over the bank. Buckley then spoke to her companion, and noticing that he made a motion with his hand as though he was going to pull a weapon from his coat pocket, jumped away from him. At the same instant the girl made a leap and plunged over the bank. She fell a distance of seventy feet, striking on the stones at the water's edge. She was instantly killed. Her neck, arms and one leg were broken, and a terrible bruise made on her face.

Buckley and his companions raised the cry that a girl had fallen over the bank. Detective Hughes and others immediately went to the water's edge, groping their way in the darkness, and found the body. It was brought up the hill and placed in the garden house. Subsequently it was removed to the police station, and thence, by direction of Coroner Morrison, who had been called to the morgue, where it was this forenoon awaiting the holding of an inquest. The young man who was with the girl fled as soon as he saw what had occurred, and the police have not been able to get any trace of him since. Garrity had left before Buckley took hold of the girl, and his flight to the spot was out of curiosity. The excitement was great at the time the body was brought to the house and no one could recognise the dead girl; and, in fact, no one but Farrell could be found who saw her take the fatal leap.

Captain Sullivan and Roundsman McCormick heard that a young man was keeping company with the girl, and supposing that he was the one with her last evening wanted him up, to find that he was not in the garden. They then found Farrell and through him learned the names of the other young men mentioned above and took them to the police office, where they made the statements as above. They were turned over to Coroner Morrison and they will be used as witnesses on the inquest. But for the fact that they followed the girl and young man to the place and interfered, the tragedy would not have happened. The father of the unfortunate girl, hearing this morning of the tragedy, and his daughter not returning home last evening, went to the morgue and there identified her. He had not before known that his daughter was not what she ought to be, and his grief on learning the circumstances attending the affair was great. The deceased was a fine looking girl, rather slight of build and low of stature. The coroner and the police will make every effort to discover the young man who was with her, and when he is found it is possible that his version of the occurrence will show that Buckley and Farrell were not so mild in their conduct as they represent. They tell their story in an unreserved manner and the police give it credence. This affair occurred within a hundred feet of the scene of the Stout-Little tragedy, and serves to bring to the minds of many the particulars of that affair.—Rochester Union, Aug. 8th.

SUICIDE OF A BEAUTIFUL GIRL.

Miss Laura Shanks, a native of St. Mary's county, Md., but for the last year a resident of South Washington, where she was regarded as the most beautiful woman in that part of the city, if not in the district, committed suicide last evening by taking laudanum, at the residence of her sister, Mrs. Parkinson, at No. 561 Tenth street, S. W., nearly opposite Ryland Chapel. For some days past the unfortunate girl seemed to have lost her usual cheerfulness of disposition, and had no appetite, but was not considered ill, mentally or physically. Yesterday she retired to her own room, which she did not leave during the entire day, when Mrs. Parkinson called her several times during the day and evening to come down and take something to eat, but she declined. About nine o'clock last evening Mrs. Parkinson took some supper to her room, and tried hard to induce her to eat, but she still declined, saying she would perhaps feel better in the morning. Mrs. Parkinson then left her. Her brother, Mr. Maurice Shanks, arrived home about 11.30 P. M., and when he reached the head of the stairs near her room, hear her groan, and called to her; but not receiving an answer, he called to others of the family, and going into the room, they found her in a stupor. Dr. Hammett was sent for, and did all he could to restore her to consciousness, but without success, as death ensued about 12.30 o'clock. An empty two-ounce vial, labelled "laudanum, poison," from Dr. Rowland's drug store, was found in the bed, and at the head, between the mattress and the pillow, a quart was found, discolored by the drug. There was also found in the bed a small box, directed to Joseph Allston, Great Mills, St. Mary's county, Md., in which were a locket and three small shirt-bosom studs, and the following note:—

"My Dear Little Darling.—I cannot live away from you any longer. The world is so cold and dreary without you, that you will have reason to believe, darling, that you are false. Your heart-broken.

LAURA."

Another note, directed to her sister, Mrs. Parkinson, was found under bed, reading as follows:—

"Mollie.—Please send this box to Joe. Don't think he has treated me unkindly because I have done this.

My dear sister, I only wish there was some way I could repay you for your kindness to me since I have been with you, but you will be rewarded for it in the next world. Your attached sister, Laura."

Please send the box by the first opportunity. * * * Give my prayer-book to Carrie. I hope that this is all that I had to leave her for a keepsake. [Here follows three lines obliterated by pencil]. Mollie, please don't let the doctors touch me. If I had wanted to live I would not have taken the laudanum. Your devoted sister, Laura."

The deceased was an orphan girl, a native of St. Mary's county, Md. She was about twenty-one years of age and as amiable as she was beautiful. The young man whose address appears on the box is a resident of the neighborhood, where she was born and raised, and it is generally believed that they were engaged to be married, as it was noticed a short time after one of his visits, some months since, that she wore an engagement ring. About two weeks ago Mrs. Parkinson received a letter from the neighborhood of Great Mills, in which it was stated that Allston was paying his young girl and courting another, and that he was making preparations to marry a young lady of that vicinity in August—a Miss Thompson. The family survey to keep the contents of the letter from being known to Laura, fearing that she would take her disappointment too much to heart. Allston came to the city about the 31st of July, and remained here until last Saturday, during which time he visited her constantly, and, as far as was known, they were on very good terms until Saturday, and from the fact that after that day the ring was not seen on her finger, it is believed they had a difference and the engagement was broken. After he left she seemed to lose all interest in the affairs of this world, and refused, up to the hour of her death, all food or nourishment.—Washington Star, Aug. 1.

A WEDDING SENSATION AT LONG BRANCH.

This fashionable sea-side summer resort had its society thrown into a state of considerable excitement a few days since, it seems, by a truly romantic and demonstrative junction of hands, and, it is to be hoped, hearts, the following particulars of which we cull from the N. Y. Sunday Mercury of the 6th inst.:—"Mr. C. France, Jr., of New York, like many other young gentlemen, fell in love. The object of his attachment was Miss Sophie Pike, an elegant and accomplished young lady of sweet seventeen, of Jewish extraction and wealthy connections. The marked attention which Mr. France has been paying Miss Pike, that was, during the past few weeks, elicited comments from many, though no one supposed that the apparent intimacy would go so far as to culminate in marriage. On Monday evening an entertainment was gotten up at the United States Hotel, to bid a formal farewell to H. B. Coxe, Esq., of Philadelphia, and his very estimable wife. Music was discovered by the band, a poem was read by Prof. Wolfe, and a speech made by Mr. Coxe. During the proceedings, which were attended by most of the guests of the hotel, Mr. France and Miss Pike were married by a magistrate. When the subsequent ball took place and the parties were discovered, Mrs. Bearimo, the mother of the young lady, screamed and fainted. Mr. Harry Pike endeavored to interfere and the whole hotel was in the utmost furore of excitement. Mr. France took his newly wedded wife to his rooms and there remained. The friends of the bride assembled in great numbers, threatening to abduct the young lady by force. The trusty guardians of the peace, in the shape of several lusty citizens, were summoned and remained on duty all night. Mrs. Bearimo and family removed to the cottage of Mrs. Phillips, her sister, while Mr. France started on his bridal tour to the White Mountains. The objections to the marriage, on the part of the bride's relations, seem to be of a religious nature. As a real, dignified and accomplished gentleman, Mr. C. France is the compeer of the best gentlemen of the branch. His father is very wealthy, and the family ranks with the first among the élite of New York.

ATTEMPTED TO MURDER HIS WIFE.

—Christian Haas, of No. 12 State street, Williamsburgh, L. I., in a very unchristian-like manner, on the 9th inst., attempted to kill his wife on their return from the Turner pic-nic. Mr. Haas during the day had quarrelled with his wife. Renewing the quarrel in the evening, he seized her by the neck and drew a large spring dirk, which he was about to plunge into her breast, when one of the occupants of the house present wrested the weapon from his hand. Haas then ran rushing from the house. In the street he was met by an officer, who, on complaint of his wife, took him to the police station.

A BLISSFUL SEPARATION.

—Contrary to what might have been anticipated from hearing their names, Mrs. Mary V. Bliss couldn't live happily, it seems, with her husband, Mr. Melancthon Bliss, so sued for a divorce, which was granted by the referee and confirmed by Judge McCunn on the 5th inst. Question.—How the lady is separated from Bliss, can she ever be happy?

NORTH AMERICAN TURNFEST.

The sons and daughters of Fatherland have, during the past week, given those of other nationalities resident in and around the metropolis another illustration of how thoroughly they understand how to secure social enjoyment, unmarred by the presence of a single discordant element. The occasion which has thus demonstrated this characteristic of our Teutonic brethern has been the celebration of the eighteenth Bundes-Turnfest of the United Turners of America, an organization the main object of which is physical improvement, and which is composed of 190 societies, representing about 15,000 members. The celebration was held in Brooklyn, E. D., commencing on the 5th inst., and continuing during the 7th 8th and 9th. Visiting societies from different parts of the country arrived during the afternoon of the 5th, and, after being escorted through the principal streets by the Williamsburgh Turn-verein and companies C and D of the Thirty-second Regiment, were greeted by their New York and Brooklyn brethren with a song of welcome at Turn Halle, which was lavishly decorated with evergreens. An address of welcome was likewise delivered by Mayor Kalbfleisch, closing as follows:—

"The physical development of our youth is too apt to be neglected, and the social families feel the hot-house treatment is an unnatural precocity, and it is not surprising that almost as many among us die as live by their wits. Your object, as I understand it, is to check this hurtful system of education, and to promote in its stead one that shall preserve a proper equilibrium between the mind and the body. If so, your efforts, gentlemen of the Turner Association, deserve and will receive the encouragement of all thoughtful men among us. A more thorough infusion of muscle and brain among us will do our youth no harm. My your association, then, go on and prosper until the day shall arrive when it shall be as easy for our youth to throw a somersault as to solve a problem in mathematics, run a foot race as to dun a delinquent debtor, and to swim a mile as to pass a set of confidentry account books. Gentlemen of the Turner Association visiting our city, I bid you, in behalf of the people of Brooklyn, a cordial, a sincere and hearty welcome. My knowledge of those in whose charge you have fallen assures me that your sojourn among us will be pleasant and agreeable to you."

A collation was then partaken of, and the balance of the evening was whiled away in a social manner. On the afternoon of the 6th a debate took place at the hall upon the benefits accruing from the practice of athletic exercises, which was well attended, and in the evening a concert, under the direction of Carl Eisner, afforded much enjoyment. At an early hour on the morning of the 7th the Turners marched to Myrtle Avenue Park, where they engaged in gymnastics, while the Brooklyn Schentzen Corps, which accompanied them, indulged in trigger practice in the galleries. About five thousand people were present, all of whom seemed to enter with zest into the spirit of the affair and enjoyed themselves in a hilarious but harmless fashion. In the evening another procession through the main streets was in order, followed by a banquet and ball at Turn Halle. A resumption of the sport was had at the park on the 8th, seven classes, each containing from eight to ten members, competing in prize turning, etc., consisting of exercises upon the horizontal bars, parallel bars, vaulting horse, high and long leaping, fencing, climbing, etc. The Williamsburgh Arion Society also enlivened the occasion with choruses, shooting was practiced by numbers, and buxom lassies and jovial youths tripped the light fantastic on the platform. On the 9th the festivities were brought to a close, Gen. Sigel being among the thousands of visitors present. The exercises were of a description similar to those of the day previous, and at their close the judges (Frederick Bertsch, of Cincinnati; Albin Stecher, of Cincinnati; Charles Blauser, of Detroit; Adelbert Krieger, of Dayton, Ohio; Herman Dote, of Boston, Mass.; Henry Heyer, of Philadelphia; Christian Aathes, of Louisville, Ky.; George Bronas, John Gloy and August Lange, of Chicago, Ill.; William Heeseler, of New York, and Louis Best, of Cleveland), presented the prizes, as follows:—For individual exercises on the horizontal bar, parallel bars, vaulting horse and buck, high and long jumping—Charles Stahl, of New York, laurel wreath and diploma; Fred. Steinbuch, of New York; Wm. Medart, of St. Louis; F. Frobst, of Chicago; Edmund Fiedler, of Chicago; F. Bunz, of Philadelphia; Otto Fischer, of Williamsburgh; John Leitzchen, of Chicago; Albert Neusche, of New York; Frederick Goetz, of Chicago; Christian Meller, of New York; Frederick Marcus, of Chicago, a diploma each. Fencing with foils—Wm. Staehlen, Williamsburgh, laurel and diploma; sabre, Otto Held, Williamsburgh, laurel and diploma. Bayonet exercise—Nicolaus Kuhn, Williamsburgh, laurel and diploma. Jumping with pole—C. Lindentnal, New York, laurel and diploma; F. Frobst, Chicago, diploma. Throwing the lance—F. Frobst, Chicago, laurel and diploma; Henry Mattern, Chicago, and D. Koch, Cincinnati, diploma by each. Wrestling—Theodore Leutz, Boston, laurel and diploma; Earnest Bohlig, Cincinnati, diploma. Target shooting —Schaber, Williamsburgh, laurel and diploma; George Heintz, New York, and Kern, Williamsburgh, a diploma each. Of about sixty pupils of the gymnastic schools who competed for prizes the following were the most successful, a diploma being awarded to each of them;—Charles Heyne, of Chicago, Ill.; George Korn, of Cincinnati, O.; Joseph Rapp, of Louisville, Ky.; Martin Fiedler, of Chicago, John Her, of Chicago; William Schnabel, of Chicago; Berlier, of Peoria, Ill.; James Goodwill, of Peoria, Ill.; Henry Deis, of Williamsburgh; Henry Deurmester, of Peoria, Ill.; L. Winzenreith, of Cleveland, O.; George Rau, of Williamsburgh. For an essay on the intellectual achievements of the societies of the German gymnasts of this country, the prize, a laurel wreath and diploma and a remuneration of $25, was awarded to Henry Metzner, of New York, corresponding secretary of the Turners' Union. Diplomas and laurel wreaths for proficiency in the close exercises were awarded as follows:—First prize to the class of the Chicago Society, of which H. Matern is leader; second prize to the Pittsburgh class, H. Schmitz, leader; third prize to the St. Louis class, H. Strom, leader.

OUR PORTRAIT GALLERY.

HARRY EYTINGE.

The subject of this sketch was born in Philadelphia, Pa., October 30th, 1822. His education in early youth was of a liberal character. He was a close student, and learning quickly, applied himself closely to the study of both classic and modern languages—nearly all of the latter he speaks with fluency. All the days, as a general thing, cherish two passions in their adolescence—to go to sea or to become actors. As a young man, Mr. Eytinge possessed both of these passions, for before he attained his 17th year he made a successful debut, and before he was 19 he commanded his own ship and owned every timber laid in her. His first dramatic experience was with a strolling dramatic company of really good actors, among whom was Barney Williams, who commenced his profession simultaneously with Mr. Eytinge. On reaching Albany, N. Y., he was offered a regular engagement at the old Pearl Street Theatre by the stage manager, Mr. Logan, the father of the Misses Lizzie and Olive Logan, which he accepted and acted there for some time. Mr. Eytinge made his metropolitan debut in the character of Malcolm, in "Macbeth;" Edwin Forrest playing Macbeth; Charles Eaton, Macduff; Mrs. John Green, Lady Macbeth, and Charles Burke, one of the witches. His success was so marked that at the conclusion of the performance he was called to the manager's room and informed that his salary would be increased and that he would be retained to play all the leading juvenile business. He played at that theatre and subsequently at the Olympic, when under the management of Mrs. Hamblin, under the name of Mr. St. John, but as soon as his success was assured he assumed the family name. In 1841 he was engaged at the Front Street, Baltimore, Md., then under the management of P. C. Wemyss. At the close of the season he took a part of Wemyss' company and a part of W. B. Bunker's company, from the Holliday Street Theatre, down to Virginia, and opened the Norfolk and Portsmouth theatres. After closing there he came north and purchased a fine bark and engaged in the Mediterranean trade for some years. Returning to New York, he undertook the management of several of the most prominent stars of that period. Meeting Seth Smith, Sr., he urged him to accept an engagement at New Orleans; Eytinge declined, but promised to go the following season. He then decided to visit England, believing that in sailor characters and French farces he would achieve success. He opened at the Strand Theatre, under Fox Cooper's management, and played "Ben, the Boatswain" and "Monsieur Tonson" twenty-eight consecutive nights. Egerton Wilkes, the author, said that no one saw T. P. Cooke ever played Ben the Boatswain so well, and assigned, as a reason therefor, "that they had both been sailors." Returning to the United States, he was engaged at the American Theatre, New Orleans, La.; then managed by Robert L. Place. The following season he was engaged at the St. Charles Theatre, under Ludlow and Smith, playing light comedy, eccentric and dialect parts. Returning north, he directed the business of Prof. Anderson, the wizard, during a summer season at the Broadway Theatre. He then engaged with John Bates, who had a circuit of theatres in Cincinnati, O., Louisville, Ky., and St. Louis, Mo., to direct the business and engagements for the circuit. The spectacle of "Faustus," with Eytinge as Mephistophiles, was produced in gorgeous style, and made some forty thousand dollars for the management, which, at last account, was still unsullied success. He was next connected with the Howard Athenæum, in Boston, Mass., and afterwards, in conjunction with Henry Willard, managed the Metropolitan Theatre, New York, afterwards the Winter Garden. He spoke the opening address and played the leading comedy business. The house being found too expensive for that time, Eytinge shortly after purchased a ship and returned to maritime life. When the civil war broke out, in 1861, he tendered his services to the government and was immediately given a command. During the war, he commanded two of the finest vessels in the service, and sent in several prizes. He has recently returned to the stage, and admits his fixed determination to remain in that profession solely. He played two character parts in "Pluck" and "Rank," at Lina Edwin's Theatre. He is engaged to open at the Grand Opera House, September 4th, where he will remain until the opening of the new Brooklyn Theatre, Brooklyn, L. I., where he is engaged for the season. He is an actor of the old school, and is considered one of the best dialect actors now in the country.

A GRAND AND NOVEL SPORTING TOURNAMENT.

TRUE CHARITY AND RECREATION COMBINED.

One of the most novel, charitable and entertaining sporting-tournaments yet brought to public attention, to the best of our knowledge, is that proposed to commence in October next, at West Flushing, L. I., consisting of all sorts of sporting contests, including shooting, base ball, foot racing, billiards, boating, skating, dancing, equestrianism in its several phases, besides other events altogether too numerous here to mention, and all for prizes worth having, for moderate entrance fees. What commends it more particularly to public attention, however, and is calculated to elicit general support and patronage, is that it is for "charity's sake," than which a nobler idea could not be connected with popular sports, and the idea is to be credited to Mr. Benjamin W. Hitchcock, the famous music publisher, whose several enterprising projects have proven him to be the right man in the right place to conduct such an affair to success. The charitable institution to which the profits of this tournament are to be donated is the "Union Home and School for the Destitute and Orphan Children of Soldiers and Sailors," located in the upper part of this city, than which none is more deserving of aid, because of its wide scope and unqualified usefulness. That CLIPPER readers may be more fully instructed in regard to this "Grand Military Festival and Fete Champetre," we here call attention to a preliminary programme published in our advertising columns, headed "Thoughts for the Generous."

IRE DAY ALL?—Two Dutch farmers at Kinderhook, whose farms were adjacent, were out in their respective fields, when one heard an unusually loud hallooing in the direction of a gap in a high stone wall, and ran with all speed to the place, and the following brief conversation ensued: "Shon, vat vas de matter?" "Vell, den," says Shon, "I was trying to climb on te top of dish high shtone vall, and I fell off, and all te shtone vall tumble down onto me, and has broken one of mine legs off and both of mine arms, smashed my rib in, and deese pig stones are laying on de top of mine body." Ish dat all?" says the other; "vy, you hollow so loud I tot you get te footache."

A SINGULAR NOUN.—A young lady at an examination in grammar was asked why the noun "bachelor" was singular. She replied immediately, with much naiveté, "Because it is very singular they don't get married."

CLIPPER VARIETIES.

Comprising Sentimental Ballads, Songs and Dances, Comic Songs, Jokes, Old Bills, Reminiscences, etc.

WRITTEN AND COLLATED EXPRESSLY FOR THE NEW YORK CLIPPER.

BONES HAS A SMALL GAME WITH THE PARSON.

INTERLOCUTOR.—Now, Mr. Bones, tell us about that trick that the old sport played you on the occasion of your last excursion to Albany.

BONES.—It was a lemoncholly affair, dat. Aint quite got ober it yet. You see I went up to de capital to see about de disputed seat in de legislature, and about dis comin'm bizniss what de newspapers exposes. Dere was me and Bill Simmons, de ole ham fat man, and Sam Johnson, dat does de whitewashin for de government, and, oh, I don't know how many more! And bime by, as we sot in de cabin after de supper, pickin' our teeth and ciltin' our experience, dere come a sassified lookin' cuss in a straight collared coat and a white choker, wid his hands folded before him and his eyes cast upon de ground. And he went on till he come to where we all sot a playin' euchre and seven up; and when he hear de jinglin' ob de money, for you must know dat we ole holders don't use nuffin but silver and gold, his eyes sort o' glistened and he hove a deep sigh, and he stopt and looked sort o' reproachful at us, and says he:

"Dis am a very wicked business my frens and bruddern. Where do you expec' to go to when de ole debbil flips his last Jack on you?"

"Take a hand, passon; come in, passon, dere's plenty o' room; only to pass the time, you know, passon.

And we all begin to make room for him.

"Ah," says de passon, "gamblin' aint de way to get to glory. It reminds me, my friends, ob de sportin' chap dat I met on my last trip up de waters of de Massassip', and de way he come it ober de rest of de passengers, ah!"

Well, of course, ebrybody wanted to know how de trick was done, so we all made room and axt him to tell us about it.

"I'll do dat," said he, "dough I never play cards myself; but we must have a fresh pack, and you must all stake, but only in fun, you know, for gamblin' is a sure of de debbil, and I nebber plays cards myself."

Well, de pasteboards was produced and de money planked, and de passon proceed to 'splain de trick. And, somehow, as fast as he played out his cards he rake de money in, but as it was only in fun and we was all of us anxious to git posted, we didn't mind, but kept on forkin over and laughin' at de passon's maneuvres, and cashionally winnin' a little of him, just to show dat we wns up to snuff, although it was only in fun, and de passon he didn't play cards himself. And when we was about cleaned out, and dere wasn't no more money to stake, says Bill Simmons, says he:—

"We's all flat broke, passon, and bein' as it's only in fun, I suppose it's about time for you to shell out again."

"O, certainly," said the passon, "but de game isn't quite ended yet. You see, when de old sport had win all deir money. It was saudder ting to git away wid de spoils, so," says he, "you see dat de—I know who got de pocket-book!

Ir.—Really, Mr. Bones, I didn't give you credit for so much shrewdness. In you the Boston Green Cloth has an efficient coadjutor. But enough of that; we will now go

SAILING DOWN THE MASSASSIP'.

SONG AND CHORUS.

Sailing down the Massassip,
When de moon is on de roll,
Hear de blythe fatboatmen sing,
As their course they onward pole;
Scarcely in the awelling tide,
Bending oars the rowers dip,
Sailing down, sailing down,
Sailing down the Massassip.
Chorus—Sailing down the Massassip', etc.

In de field de darkeys jine
The gay chorus as we go,
While dey plv de busy spade,
Or exert the nimble hoe;
And a hearty cheer goes up,
Ringing out from many a lip,
Sailing down, sailing down,
Sailing down the Massassip'.
Chorus—Sailing down the Massassip', etc.

Yonder, in the everglade,
Resting there a homely cot,
There abides a lovely maid—
Would that I might share her lot.
There forever would I dwell,
But, 'tis past, ce's time to slip,
Sailing down, sailing down,
Sailing down the Massassip'.
Chorus—Sailing down the Massassip', etc.

Many a year is to its grave
Since I first that maid vide,
And like phantoms of the past
Still before my fancy glide
Figures of the tried and true,
Whose strong hands I used to grip,
Sailing down, sailing down,
Sailing down the Massassip'.
Chorus—Sailing down the Massassip', etc.

Brothers true and boon companions,
Sealed to faith in dey hearts' core,
May we meet in hope hereafter
On the silent river's shore,
And not tell to make a landing
When we shall our cable slip;
Sailing down, sailing down,
Sailing down the Massassip'.
Chorus—Sailing down the Massassip', etc.

MITCHELL'S PLAY BILLS OF THE OLYMPIC.

When Mitchell first opened the Olympic Theatre, in this city, and indeed for several years afterwards, his bills were among the most amusing and spicy things which he did. The following is one of them:—

The first appearance of this unrivalled tragedian,

MR. MITCHELL,

in the arduous, overpowering, philosophical and awfully tremendous character of

HAMLET,

may be looked upon as an era of the dramatic annals of the present generation, and then again it may not. To say in the embodiment of this part he displayed the solemnity and coach horse style of the overpowering majesty of

JOHN PHILIP KEMBLE,

TALMA,

the grace and dignity of

YOUNG,

the head and front of

HAMBLIN,

and the manly form and spirit of

FORREST,

with the fire and energy of the

WO KEANS,

would, perhaps, be considered as going it a leetle too strong—but it is not so—for it is a fact susceptible of the most ample proof that he did things which none of the above ever attempted. If there exists in the western world one individual who doubts this, let that individual come, see and judge for himself.

CELEBRATED ARTISTS

HOW IS THAT FOR LEW?

Song and Dance.

TO LEW BENEDICT.

'Twas coming from the Central Park
Down Fifth avenue,
I met a charming little miss,
Dressed in a suit of blue;
She smiled on me as she passed by,
And said, "how do you do,"
I raised my hat, politely bowed,
Oh, how was that for Lew?

Chorus—She was the dearest little miss that ever the sun shone on;
I'll ne'er forget the day of last June when I her love had won.
Oh nothing in this world shall part me from this maiden true,
I love her, yes, with all my heart; oh how is that for Lew?

We met upon the avenue,
Quite often after this;
I'd take a stroll with darling's side,
I dream't of coming bliss;
I told my love one summer night,
And vowed I would be true.
She said, "I'll skate with you,"
Oh, how is that for Lew?

Chorus—She was, &c.

The days have come, and they have gone,
Departed like a dream,
And happy in our wedded life,
We drift along life's stream;
A darling little wife is mine,
A bounding boy also,
A little cottage in the dell,
Oh, how is that for Lew?

Chorus—She was, &c.

SENSATION FIFTY YEARS AGO.

The following is a play bill of the Penzance Theatre (England), in which the "Castle Spectre" appears to have been the great attraction, and the way the appearance of the specire is worked up in the bill shows that the people of the olden time were as fond of sensation as we are at the present day.

PENZANCE THEATRE.

By Permission of the Worshipful the Mayor,
ON MONDAY EVENING APRIL 2, 1821,
Will be performed the popular and admired drama of the CASTLE SPECTRE.

Earl Osmond	Mr. Osbaldiston
Reginald	Mr. Angel
Father Philip	Mr. Dawson
Kenric	Mr. Wilton
Percy	Mr. Butler
Hassan	Mr. Dawson, Jun
Motley	Mr. Angel

In Act Fourth, the Oratory, where the Spectre appears, her white and flowing garments
SPOTTED WITH BLOOD!
Her eyes are lifted upwards—her arms extended towards heaven,
AND A LARGE WOUND APPEARS ON HER BOSOM!
Angela sinks upon her knee, with her eyes rivetted upon the figure, which for some moments remains motionless, at length
THE SPECTRE ADVANCES SLOWLY TOWARDS ANGELA, and seems to invoke a blessing on her! Angela rises and follows—the Spectre waves her hand as bidding her farewell.
A BLAZE OF LIGHT ILLUMINATES THE ORATORY! and the vision gradually disappears.
A COMIC SONG BY MR. ANGEL.
To conclude with an entire new laughable farce, as performed last season, at the Theatre Royal, English Opera, with the most unbounded applause, called
THE RENDEZVOUS;
OR, FRIGHT UPON FRIGHT.

Quake	Mr. Dawson, Jun
Charles	Mr. Butler
Bolding	Mr. Wilton
Smart	Mr. Angel
Rose	Mrs. Dawson

The highly interesting drama of the "Miller and his Men; or, the Robbers of Bohemia," with new and splendid scenery, machinery and decorations, will be brought forward immediately. Sheridan's tragic play of "Pizarro," will be speedily revived. The popular tragedy of "Bertram; or, the Castle of Aldobrand," to be played at the Theatre Royal, Drury Lane, upwards of 100 nights, for the celebrated Mr. Kean, is in rehearsal. An interesting melo-drama called the "Woodman's Hut; or the Blazing Forest," is also in preparation. The grand opera of "The Slaves," with new scenery and dresses, will be brought forward as early as possible.

Nights of playing—Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays.

AN ELEPHANT IN DISTRESS.

In "Blue Beard" a stage elephant was used at a London theatre. On the first night, as the hind legs were going over a trap, it gave way and the two supers, who represented the hinder part of the sagacious quadruped, went through. The result was that Blue Beard was spilled out and the two front legs were seen lifted in the air, kicking away most violently, while the two hind legs were kicking away, not less violently, under the stage. The curtain had to be dropped before the elephant could resume his natural footing.

BASE BALL.

OLYMPIC vs. BOSTON.

The most interesting and exciting game of ball ever played on the Olympic ground in Washington, was the fifth game of the championship series between the two divisions of the old "Red Stockings"—Boston and Olympic—on the 9th inst. A heavy rain storm almost 24 hours before deterred many from witnessing the game, only about fifteen hundred persons being present. The game was a fine one, closely contested, and was a tie—4 to 4—at the eighth innings. The Boston presented a full nine; while the Olympic were short the services of Allison, who was injured in the Athletic game. Quite a change was made in their nine in consequence. Force going to third base, Leonard to short, Thomas to second, Waterman catching and Burroughs to left field—only three men being in regular positions. This change worked well, however, and the loss of the game cannot be attributed to it, but rather to weakness at the bat, a fault that has clung to them during the season. The catching of Waterman was very fine, while by his batting he secured three out of the four runs. The play of Thomas at second was good, and the fielding of Burroughs very fine. George Wright, at short, played with a vim that strengthened the nine, supported finely by Barnes at second. The fielding of Barnes and Birdsall was also very fine. The Boston nine also played fine effect of good discipline, and in this respect they were superior to the Olympic, for there has been a want of discipline and proper training on the part of the managers of the Olympic. At 4.05 P. M., the Olympics, having won the toss, sent the Bostons to the bat. Mr. J. J. Beardsley acting as umpire.

First Innings.—George Wright came to the bat, and his appearance was the subject of applause; but it was "his day off," as batting to his little rival, Force, he retired at first; Barnes followed, and Birdsall sending him to first, the side was out without a blank. Force hit one to G. Wright, who stopped it well, but was dropped by Gould; Leonard and Waterman each batted for a base, but Brainard batted Leonard out at the third; Mills was taken by Barrows. Force scoring; Burroughs batted finely for a base, reaching it on Waterman; Hall, however, sent one to centre field and Harry stopped run getting. Two runs.

2. McVey batted short to the third for his base. Spalding and Gould were taken on balls, filling the bases, but Thomas hit to the left, sending in Gould; H. Wright first on hit past Brainard, and second on an error by Force; George Wright out by Thomas and Mills, Barrows scoring; Barnes hit to the left which Burroughs secured after a long, hard run, a magnificent catch closing the innings, with three runs—all earned.....Hale made a fine second base play to the left field, and again it looked charmingly for the O's, but Glenn, not waiting for good ball, hit at the first which went to third, where Thomas followed suit by hitting to Barnes. Force then came to the bat, but it was his day off too, and one could see that the little captain did not feel confident; he hit a hard one, however, which Birdsall cut under by a hard run, leaving Hall on the base. No runs. Score 7 to 4, and the game and series won by the superior batting of the Boston nine.

Everybody felt paid at witnessing such a contest, though it resulted disastrously to the home club. The Olympics must know by this time that in-door work is not conducive to muscle, and that in close and arduous practice at the bat lies their only salvation. The score:—

THE TURF.

THE BUFFALO PARK TROTTING MEETING.

FIRST DAY—TUESDAY, AUG. 8TH.

CLARA G. WINS THE THREE MINUTE PURSE, AND JUDGE FULLERTON THE 2:34 PURSE—THE THIRD RACE UNFINISHED.

The sixth annual trotting meeting of the Buffalo Park Association commenced on Tuesday, the 8th inst., and continued over four days. The weather was delightful, the track in excellent order and the attendance very large, fully 10,000 persons being present on the ground. The first race was for a purse of $2,000, for horses that had never trotted better than three minutes; the winner taking $1,200, the second $500 and the third $300; mile heats, best three in five, in harness. There were eleven starters, but one of them, Miss Hartford, lame and unable to start, Lady Goldsmith, left the field of starters before the word was given, and withdrawn, left the field of starters in number. Below we give the summary of the race, and it is only necessary to state that the winner, Clara G., was the favorite before the race and she won it in three straight heats, each one of which was the fastest three ever made by what may be termed a "three mare." She is very handsome and promising and will yet make her mark on the trotting turf. She is owned and trained by Mr. Joseph Cairns Simpson, the author of "Horse Portraiture," an excellent and practical work on the training of the trotting horse, and formerly one of the editors of The Turf, Field and Farm, in this city. Mr. Simpson has conclusively shown that his knowledge of training horses is not entirely theoretical by his winning of this race.

BUFFALO PARK, August 8th, 1871.—Purse $2,000, for horses that had never beaten three minutes; $1,200 to first, $500 to second and $300 to third horse; mile heats, best three in five, in harness.

The second race was for a purse of $5,000, for horses that had never trotted better than 2:36; the winner taking $3,000, the second $1,000, and the third and fourth horses $700 and $300 respectively. There were eighteen entries for this race, and the Association got back their purse of $4,000 and $4,000 additional from the 10 per cent. entrance money. Three were drawn—Fanny Lambert, Albatross and Kansas Maid—leaving fifteen to start. Judge Fullerton, trained and driven by Dan Mace, was the favorite over the field at the start, but after he had lost the first two heats, his backers became so alarmed that they tried to hedge their money by laying $100 to $6 against him. He was on a break on the first two heats when the word was given, and behaved unsteadily throughout in both, but afterwards trotted more steadily, and driving from the sulky behind Judge Fullerton was magnificent, and he received a perfect ovation of applause from the vast multitude for his superb skill in piloting his horse to victory. The winner is owned by Mr. Humphreys, of this city, and was sired by Major Winfield, now called Edward Everett. Mr. Humphreys bought him last fall for $17,500, when a four year old, and he bids fair to prove a remunerative investment.

The third race, for a purse of $10,000, for 2:27 horses, was commenced, but after one heat had been trotted and won by Major Allen (formerly called Locust), in 2:26¾, darkness came on, and the race was postponed.

SAME DAY.—Purse $5,000, for horses that have never trotted better than 2:24; $3,000 to first, $1,000 to second, $700 to third and $300 to fourth horse; mile heats, best three in five, in harness. Benj. Mace entered ch g Judge Fullerton (formerly the Bull Colt) 6 4 1 1 1

SECOND DAY, WEDNESDAY, AUG. 9TH.

MAJOR ALLEN WINS THE 2:27 PURSE—MATT SMITH THE 2:30 PURSE—AND CARRIES OFF THE 2:45 PURSE, FOR SADDLE HORSES.

Large as the attendance had been the first day, it was exceeded by that of the second day. The weather continued pleasant, and the track was in admirable order for fast time. The Park Association refunded to Mr. Thos. E. Wallace, of New York, the entrance money for his mare Purity, who had died here suddenly on Sunday last; she was entered in the great $10,000 purse for 2:20.

The first race was the unfinished trot of the previous day, for horses that had never beaten 2:27; the first heat of which had been won by Major Allen, better known by his former name, Locust, when darkness coming on, caused a postponement of the race. Previous to the race commencing, Harry Harley, owned by Mr. H. Buck, of Buffalo, and the winner of the $20,000 purse, for 2:30 horses, at this meeting last year, and driven by Budd Doble, was the favorite against the rest, Major Allen being sold in pools in the field. However, the latter won the first heat, and Harry Harley continued to be the first choice, as Major Allen was known to be a most unreliable animal to back. He, however, in the hands of Tom Carpenter, trotted steadily and honestly and won in three straight heats in capital time. Harry Harley took second money, and Byron third.

Summary:—

BUFFALO PARK, Aug. 9th.—FIRST RACE.—Purse, $10,000, for horses that have never beaten 2:27; $5,000 to first horse; $2,500 to second, $1,500 to third, and $1,000 to fourth.

The second race was for the $10,000 purse for horses that had never trotted better than 2:30; $5,000 to the winner, $2,500 to the second horse, $1,500 and $1,000 respectively to the third and fourth horses. There were 14 entries, for which Gen. Knox, Elmo, Black Maria, and Ida May were drawn and Purity was dead, nine starting. This was a heavy betting race, Lady Fisk and Suzie being the favorites, and all the others selling in the field. It was won by the Chestnut horse, Matt Smith, in splendid style, in three straight heats, Suzie and Bonnie Boy taking the second and third money. The New York division, especially William Lovell, Barney Jackman, James McCloud and Scully lost heavily on this race, by backing the field against Matt Smith after he had won the first heat. Dan Mace, Jim Hoff of California, W. Drake and Mr. Humphreys, the owner of Judge Fullerton, won large stakes on this race.

Summary:—

SECOND RACE.—SAME DAY.—Purse, $10,000: for horses in harness that have never beaten 2:30: $5,000 to first, $2,500 to second, $1,500 to third, $1,000 to fourth.

The third race was for a purse of $1,800, under saddle, for horses that had never beaten 2:45; the winner taking $900; the second and third, $480 and $180, respectively. There were four entries, but only two started, Clara G. and General Sherman. The other two, Lady Elsie and Judge Fullerton, were withdrawn, Dan Mace being sick and unable to ride the latter horse. This left the race a sure thing for Clara G., who won in two heats, distancing Gen. Sherman in the second. Some sharp practice in the pool betting was done in the race. Judge Fullerton was bought against the field, but when the sharpers found out that he would not start, they bought Clara G. against the field, leaving the green ones only one moderate horse in the field to do battle for their money.

THIRD DAY, THURSDAY, AUG. 10TH.

THE PURSE FOR 2:20 HORSES WON BY UNCLE ABE; AND THE 2:24 PURSE BY HOTSPUR. AN IMMENSE ASSEMBLAGE AND BRILLIANT TROTTING.

The attendance at the Driving Park on the third day was larger than on the previous days, fully 15,000 persons being present. The weather continued as favorable as before and the track was in capital going order. The pool betting on the two races was enormous, over $200,000 worth of pools being sold during the day. Among the visitors were Commodore Vanderbilt and Col. Fisk, and the spectators became impressed with the conviction that the race for the 2:25 purse was virtually a contest between Erie and Central, for Myron Perry belongs to Commodore Vanderbilt, who is president of the latter line, while Fisk and the Erie division had heavily pitted against that horse and backed their representative, Hotspur, owned by Colonel Russell, of Boston, to a large amount. It was the general belief that this antagonistic feeling influenced the decision of the judges in the third heat, when Myron Perry came in ahead but was placed last; Mr. George C. Hall, of Brooklyn, the purchasing agent of the Erie railroad, being one of the judges. Capt. Frank Perew, the owner of Byron, was so dissatisfied with the decision of the judges in pronouncing the first heat a "dead heat," that he withdrew his horse. Commodore Vanderbilt, although he thought the third heat unjustly taken away from him, was highly gratified at the performance of his horse, Myron Perry, notwithstanding his defeat by his old opponent, Hotspur.

In the first race, which was for horses that had never beaten 2:20, for a purse of $3,000, divided into four parts, of $1,800, $700, $600 and $500, for first, second, third and fourth horses, there were sixteen entries and ten starters. The favorite in the betting was Uncle Abe, and he won cleverly in three straight heats, Barney taking the second money, Ed. Eaton, the third, and Sears O. Hurd, money. The latter was "off" in consequence of her two previous races, or she would have probably won. We give the summary:—

FIRST RACE—Purse $3,000, for horses that have never beaten 2:20; $1,800 to the first horse, $700 to the second, $500 to the third, and $300 to the fourth

The second race was for the $6,400 purse for horses that had never beaten 2:24: $3,500 for the first horse, $1,500 for the second, and $1,000 for the third. There were seven entries, but Tammany and James D. McMann being drawn, left Myron Perry, Hotspur, Thomas Jefferson, Pilot Temple, and Byron to contend for the money. Hotspur was the favorite, with Thomas Jefferson in almost equal demand; the others selling in the field. The first heat was declared "dead" between Hotspur and Byron; Myron Perry third, only half a length behind, and Jefferson a bad fourth. Time, 2:25¾. Byron was now drawn, in consequence of his owner being dissatisfied with the judges' decision. Myron Perry won the second heat in 2:28. Hotspur second. The former now became the favorite, and he came in first in the third heat in 2:23¾, but Dobie claiming that Borst, Perry's driver, had swerved on the stretch, the judges allowed the claim and gave the heat to Hotspur, putting Myron Perry last. This decision produced general dissatisfaction, which was loudly expressed among the spectators. It was now even betting between Hotspur and Myron Perry. Pilot was drawn, and but three started. Hotspur won the fourth and fifth heats in 2:25¾, 2:28, thus winning first money. Summary:—

SAME DAY.—SECOND RACE.—Purse, $6,000, for horses that have never done better than 2:24; $3,500 to the first horse, $1,500 to the second, and $1,000 to the third. There were seven entries, but Tammany and James D. McMann being drawn, left Myron Perry, Hotspur, Thomas Jefferson, Pilot Temple, and Byron to contend for the money. FOURTH DAY, FRIDAY, AUG. 11TH.

JUDGE BRIGHAM WINS THE PURSE FOR 2:40 HORSES AND IS SOLD FOR $30,000. GOLDSMITH MAID WINS THE PURSE FREE FOR ALL HORSES, IN THE FASTEST CONSECUTIVE THREE HEATS ON RECORD. DEXTER'S TIME STILL UNBEATEN.

This was the last day of the most brilliant trotting meeting ever witnessed, and the weather, as on the previous days, was delightfully pleasant, attracting a vast crowd, estimated at 12,000 persons, to the park. The first race was for the purse of $20,000, for horses that had never beaten 2:40, and but six out of the thirteen entries started, the brilliant public performance of Judge Fullerton and the high private reputation of Judge Brigham frightening away all the rest. The private trials of the latter were regarded as extraordinarily fast, and his friends did not hesitate to back him against such a proved flyer as Judge Fullerton. The betting before the race commenced was $600 to $200 on Fullerton, but after he had won the first heat it was $100 to $50 on him. In the first heat (the favorite, after a splendid contest, beat Judge Brigham (who had been sired by a bad break just after the start) to the score by two lengths in 2:23¾. In the second heat, Judge Brigham fairly outtrotted Fullerton, bringing him home by two lengths, and both in fine time, extraordinary fast time, for horses of this class, of 2:23. Before the next heat Judge Brigham was purchased by Mr. George Hall, of Brooklyn, for Jay Gould, the Erie director, for the large price of $30,000. In the next two heats and race in fine style, exhibiting wonderful speed and gameness, in 2:23¼; 2:24¾; Judge Fullerton being second in both, and J. H. Burke third, the others distanced. The winner is by Hyndle's Hambletonian out of an American Star mare, being the same cross that produced Dexter. Summary:—

FOURTH DAY.—Friday, August 11th. First race—Purse $6,000, for horses that have never beaten 2:40; $3,000 to the first horse, $1,500 to the second, $700 to the third and $500 to the fourth; mile heats, in 3, in harness.

The second and concluding race was the open purse of $5,000, for all horses, for which the only starters were Goldsmith Maid, American Girl and Lucy. There was also an additional premium of $2,500 to the horse making the fastest time, provided it beat Dexter's time of 2:17¼. The betting was 100 to $30 on the Maid, while Lucy had the call over American Girl.

First Heat.—On the word, were scoring the rules of Goldsmith Maid broke, and the frightened animal dashed away at full speed. With wonderful presence of mind, Budd Doble sprang from his seat in the sulky upon her back, and sitting on the check rein, brought her to a stand still before she had gone an eighth of a mile. This performance of Doble elicited long and loud applause from the crowd. The reins were rearranged and a start made, Goldsmith Maid leading to the quarter in 34½ seconds, and to the half in 1:11. The contest on the last half mile was most exciting for Lucy, resulting in a most markedly fast closed finish on the Maid and Doble, who obliged to use the whip to urge her to her best speed. She came home a winner of the heat by a neck, American Girl six lengths behind Lucy. Time, 2:19¾.

Second Heat.—Goldsmith Maid led Lucy three lengths to the quarter quarter pole, in 36 sec., and the same to the half in 1:16, winning the heat by four lengths in 2:19¾, Lucy fifteen lengths before American Girl.

Third Heat.—Goldsmith Maid led Lucy two lengths to the quarter in 35 sec., but the latter closed up on the back stretch, and was on the Maid's wheel at the half mile in 1:08½. A magnificent contest between the two horses resulted in Goldsmith Maid winning the heat by a neck in 2:20, American Girl twenty lengths behind. This was Goldsmith Maid's fastest time, and the judges announced that the three heats were the fastest ever trotted by precisely one second. The fastest time record for three consecutive heats previously was that of Goldsmith Maid herself, made over this same course, Aug. 12, 1869, when she trotted and won the race in 2:19¾; 2:19¾; 2:19¾. Dexter's time yet remains unbeaten. We give the summary:—

SAME DAY.—Second Race.—Purse $5,000, for all horses; $3,000 to the first horse, $1,500 to the second and $500 to the third; best three in five, in harness, with an additional purse of $2,500 to the horse making the fastest time, providing it made Dexter's time, 2:17¼.

THE GOODWOOD MEETING.

We herewith present details of the running in the three principal events decided at Goodwood, Eng., on the 26th, 26th and 27th ult. respectively, the results of which were previously announced by telegraph:—

STEWARD'S CUP.—Value 300 sovs (Handicap), by subscription of 10 sovs each, with 100 added; winners extra; 2 y. C., 94 subs.

T. E. Cash's Anton, by Athelstane, out of The Twin, 3 yrs, 6st 11lb. (carried 7st) ..... F. Crickmere 1

Lord Anglesey's Corregidor, 3 yrs, 7st ..... H. Dower 2

W. A. Baker's Prior, 4 yrs, 9st ..... Wisell 3

There were twenty-four other starters. Betting:—6 to 1 agst Jackal, 8 to 1 agst Stray, 10 to 1 each agst Moonraker and Oxonian, 100 to 8 each agst Jubilee and Fr—rolly, 100 to 6 agst Corregidor, 20 to 1 agst Tempus, 25 to 1 each agst Maid, Veranda, Tinhorpe, and Pitchfork, 30 to 1 agst Queen of the May, 100 to 3 each agst Anton, the Frailty colt, Amy, Retherston, Pete, the Gong Boy, M'Alpine, Digby Grand, and Sylla, 50 to 1 each agst Pretender, The Knight, Bamboo, and Matilida, and 66 to 1 agst Competitor. Although, with the exception of Amy, none of the horses ever broke away more than a couple of hundred yards, there was really manificent room to start such a gigantic field. When, therefore, exactly an hour had been consumed they were dispatched on most indifferent terms, and in rain was a search made for Jackal, Stray and Frivolity in the van. Oxonian, on the right, dashed away at score, and was quickly leading half a dozen lengths from Anton, M'Alpine and Digby Grand in his track; while prominent in the centre were Corregidor and Maid, with Orator, Queen of the May, Lady Athelstane, and Matilida on the left. To enter into details would be absurd, as while the middle lot were tumbling and cannoning against each other all the way, there was nothing in it except Oxonian to within a quarter of a mile of home, when Anton, who had commenced in the last half dozen strides, collared him, and drawing away at every stride, won in hollow style by fifteen lengths. Oxonian, ceasing to persevere at the end, Corregidor finished second, two lengths before Pliou, with the Woodyates horse fourth, Jubilee fifth, Barefoot sixth, Maid seventh, and Sylla eighth. The stragglers were Festival, Adrian, Tim Weaver, Blenheim, Queen of the May, Orator and Lady Athelstone. Wheeler, Skelton, T. Osborne, Warrington and Lowe were severely reprimanded for misconduct at start. Run in 1:17. Value of the stakes, 1,000 sovs.

GOODWOOD STAKES (Handicap) of 75 sovs. each, 15ft. and only 5 if declared, &c., with 100 added; winners, 7lb. extra; the second received 100 sovs, out of the stakes; two miles and a half; 74 subs., 44 of whom paid 5 sovs. each.

Mr. Bowes' ch g Taraban, by Rataplan, out of Wiasma, aged, 8st. 5lb. (incl 7lb. extra) ..... Fordham 1

W. Day's b c, by Wamba, out of Lady Hungerford, 3 yrs, 6st. 5lb ..... Constable 2

W. S. Crawfurd's Claudius, 4 yrs, 8st. 9lb ..... T. Chaloner 3

Eleven others started. Betting:—3 to 1 agst the Lady Hungerford colt, 5 to 1 agst Lord Hawke, 7 to 1 agst White Rose, 8 to 1 agst Cherie, 10 to 1 agst Taraban, 100 to 8 agst Indian Ocean, 100 to 6 agst Claudius, 25 to 1 agst Rose of Athol, 33 to 1 agst Cardigan, 40 to 1 agst Pennilless, and 50 to 1 agst Nona and Curacoa. At the first attempt Taraban jumped away with a clear lead of Lord Hawke, Cardigan, Claudius and the Lady Hungerford colt, to whom succeeded Indian Ocean, Cherie, Pennilless, White Rose and Curacoa, with Furley last. Very little change occurred until going out of the Kennels, when the Lady Hungerford, Pennilless, Cherie, Claudia and Lord Hawke, became the immediate attendants of Taraban, the second division consisting of Indian Ocean, White Rose, Claudius and Curacoa, while Rose of Athol, Nona and Orielan, in the order named, were now lengths astern of the main body. At the end of three-quarters of a mile Taraban was pulled back several places, and the Lady Hungerford colt took a slight lead from Pennilless, Cherie and Cardigan, who went on clear of Lord Hawke, Furley and Taraban in the loop, where the Woodyates colt ran rather wide. Soon afterwards Cherie went to the head of affairs, and Jarvis, pushing her along to make the weight tell, she was half a dozen lengths before the Lady Hungerford colt at the mile post, Pennilless going on third, Lord Hawke fourth, White Rose fifth and Furley sixth. Cardigan having shot his bolt, Claudius, Indian Ocean, Taraban and Curacoa came on next, with Nona now hopelessly last. Pennilless going on third, Directly they entered the straight Claudius steered to the right, Taraban, in the meanwhile, keeping to the rails, and in descending the hill the Lady Hungerford colt took up the running from the favorite, Pennilless struggling on to the half mile post, where she compounded, leaving Lord Hawke in the centre, and Claudius at the girths of White Rose on the left. Although Cherie was well served by her impost, the Lady Hungerford colt always had the best of her to the distance, where Lord Hawke and White Rose hung out distress signals, and momentarily Claudius very much flattered his partisans, as in answer to a determined effort he gradually improved his position. While all eyes, however, were fixed in this direction, Taraban had drawn level on the inside, and shooting out with nearly a length the best of it opposite the stand, he held his own in a hard struggle, and vanquished the favorite by half a length, with nothing to spare, after running more gamely than was considered his wont. A length off, Claudius was third, about twice as far before White Rose (fourth), with Cherie fifth, Rose of Athol sixth, Lord Hawke seventh, Pennilless eighth, Furley ninth, and Indian Ocean tenth, while Nona trotted in behind the other three. Not value of the stakes, £725. Run in 5 min. 7 sec.

GOODWOOD CUP, value, 300 sovs, added to a subscription of 20 sovs each, for 3 yr olds and upwards; 2 miles and a half; 2 yr. age, with penalties and allowances; the second received 100 sovs out of the stakes; two miles and a half; 20 subs.

F. Mouncey entered Shannon, by Lambton, dam by Newminster, 3 yrs, 7st 4 lb ..... Hunt 1

Baron Rothschild entered Favonius, 3 yrs, 8st ..... T. Chaloner 2

Mr. Lombard entered Mortemer, 6 yrs, 9st 7 lb ..... Fordham 3

Mr. Lombard entered Dutch Skater, 5 yrs, 9st 7 lb ..... Custance 4

Mr. Savile entered Ripponden, 3 yrs, 7st 7 lb ..... Maidment 0

Betting—even on Mortemer, 11 to 8 agst Favonius, 100 to 7 agst Ripponden, and 100 to 1 agst Shannon. They started a very slow pace, and after the first fifty yards Mortemer went to the front, followed by Favonius, Dutch Skater and Ripponden to the turn out of the straight, when the latter became last. Except that Dutch Skater and Shannon more than once changed places, there was no alteration to the mile post, where Mortemer was still a couple of lengths before Favonius, with the others in a cluster until approaching the turn, when Shannon drew away from the Skater and Ripponden. Then Favonius began to steal up to Mortemer, whom he deprived of the command rather less than three-quarters of a mile of home, and the pace becoming good, Shannon also headed Mortemer directly they entered the straight. Close up with the favorite were Dutch Skater and Ripponden on the whip hand to the rails, at which point Shannon, on the inside, took up the running, Favonius and Mortemer going well to the distance, where they (the latter) were beaten, but Dutch Skater and Ripponden safe, so well had the pair been going because of the crawling pace. Still Shannon did not come back to them, and the situation getting critical, Chaloner and Fordham almost simultaneously called on their horses, and amidst a scene of extraordinary excitement, rarely paralleled, they failed to reach the outsider, who disposed of Favonius by half a length, and the Derby winner in turn beat Mortemer by a neck, with the other two exactly level at the girths of the fallen Frenchman. Run in 5 min. 29 sec.

TROTTING AT FLEETWOOD PARK.—On Monday, the 7th inst., a sweepstakes trot for $750; mile heats, best three in five, took place on the Fleetwood Park track, between John Murphy's b m Lady Murphy, in harness; W. Weeks' ch g Star Henry, in harness, and H. Casey's ch g Hickey, to wagon. The day being fine, there was a large attendance and a good race was witnessed. Lady Murphy was a great favorite in the pools over the other two, and she well deserved the confidence reposed in her, for she won the race in three straight but well contested heats, Star Henry being second in the first two, and Hickey second in the last. Summary:—

FLEETWOOD PARK, MORRISANIA, Aug. 7th, 1871.—Sweepstakes $750; mile heats, best three in five.

John Murphy entered b m Lady Murphy, in harness	1	1	1
William Weeks entered ch g Star Henry, in harness	2	2	3
H. Casey entered ch g Hickey, to wagon	3	3	2

Time, 2:47¾; 2:45¾; 2:45¾.

THE CHARTER OAK STOCK BREEDERS' ASSOCIATION was lately organized at Hartford, Conn. They have procured a tract of land, two miles out of the city, and intend to have a first-class park. Proposals are now being received for the construction of a mile track.

THREE TROTS are to come off at the grounds of the Cheshire County Agricultural Society, Keene, N. H., on Sept. 28th, the premiums offered for which aggregate $1,300. For further particulars see advertisement in another column.

A PRAISEWORTHY SENTIMENT.—The Turner ball at Williamsburgh, L. I., on the evening of the 10th inst., gave opportunity for a lad to exhibit most commendable honesty, and the expression by the president of a praiseworthy sentiment that ought to be more generally recognized in our athletic sports. The circumstance is told as follows:—Emile Stein, a Williamsburgh lad, found a well filled wallet, which, instead of appropriating, which too many would have been inclined to do, handed it to the president, who thereupon took the youth on the platform, announced the case and crowned him with a laurel wreath, at the same time pronouncing a deserving eulogy on his conduct in the following brief but expressive phrase:—"We cultivate the body and honor the victors in our games and give likewise our highest praise and award to moral virtues." Of course warm plaudits followed from the assembly, and young Stein was carried from the platform in the arms of the Turners around the room, the band playing an enlivening air.

THE GAME OF CHESS.

To Correspondents.

A. E. H.—Few indeed ever solved the "Indian Problem" without help of some sort. 1...Q B home. Now if Black, K1 P one step, P to K1 4; if K1 P two steps, P to Kt 3; then Rook shuts off Q B's and Kt's checks. For the Schachzeitung we selected Nos. 4, 6, 10, and "Eureka." New problems always welcome. Send up to "The Larches," if possible. F. E. B. C. has honored us with a call.

CHAS. A. GILBERT.—We have received with profound pleasure your MS. catalogue, by the hands of E. B. C. Will write at length.

S. LAGER.—In Dakota or Crimoline the more agreeable mistress?

F. H. CURTISS.—Shown up, you see. "Brev. 2 Brill" will be dispatched in two papers more; when we get to them. Your observations will be very welcome.

H. J. M.—Solutions, as usual, correct.

HENRY, Warren, Ohio.—It is impossible, at this season of the year, crowded as we are, to answer you. You are quite justified in the claim of Paulsen (Leeds) as Prof. Anderssen's equal. They played a grand match for superiority and got off exactly even. Prof. A. then won a Tourney in which both were engaged; and then they contested three games, L. P. winning two to a draw. You must excuse our not citing the others in detail.

J. R. KIMBRAN.—"Black" is right; White's K can not go on a square covered by the "pinned" Bishop. Yes! A player may have the Q escort, and a new Q for every P he can get to the adversary's royal rank—his own 8th. Did you not see the Schachzeitung's prize prob. and its partial solution in the CLIPPER, a few weeks since?

IF WE'VE OMITTED ANY, owing to the two week's break in our chit chat, why we—forgive 'em.

CHESS JOURNAL'S 1ST TOURNEY.—The seven Prizes in this elaborate affair were fairly cut as follows, commencing at the 1st:—Geo. E. Carpenter, L. W. Davis, G. F. Bixby, John Gardner, S. S. Palmer, Max Judd, and Wm. A. Shinkman. The highest per cent. of merit awarded was .88, the lowest .13. The highest on the list, .67 per ct. above his next competitor, also by Mr. Carpenter, in our Enigma No. 763, May 13th, '71. A few more of the highest on the list, that are not crowded with too many pieces, we shall try to give. In order of per centages in value the list heads off thus:—Carpenter, .67; O. A. Brownson, Jr., .61; G. F. Bixby; Max Judd; L. W. Davis; John Gardner, etc., the latter gentleman's 1st figure being .57.

Introductory Overture.

MONDAY, Aug. 13th, 1871.

We do not think that sufficient praise has been awarded the Commissioners of Parks for their efforts to afford comfort, convenience, and amusement for the people free of cost. Our city parks, which have heretofore been an eyesore to the community, have been, or are being, converted into beautiful resorts, with well-laid out walks, grass plats, and flower beds, with fountains throwing up streams of water which add to the picture, and give an air of coolness to the atmosphere. Not only this, but they have also given concerts on several afternoons, with first-class brass bands engaged expressly for the purpose. In the City Hall Park, which already makes such a pleasing appearance, and the improvements are not all completed yet, we have had several concerts, at which the bone and sinew have embraced the opportunity to enjoy free music at the close of their day's labors, for these musical offerings, with an eye to the pleasure of the masses, have commenced at six o'clock, "when the poor man's work is done." We take great pleasure in making this record, and we know that the public enjoy and appreciate the efforts of the Park Commission in this direction.....To-night we were to have a new edition of the blondes, revised and improved, and prepared expressly for this market, but the steamer conveying the scenery might was detained, and a postponement was deemed necessary. All right. We have no objection to the blondes. Some of the papers seem to have an idea that the yellow-haired lassies are done for, that they died out last summer, etc. Bless you, this is all a mistake; the blondes will never die, excepting their tresses, which dye cruel the wearers may live. No, no, we are not done with the merry girls of the flaxen brigade, and their clever leader, the pretty, hard-working Lydia, will be welcomed with an enthusiasm which only a metropolitan audience knows how to display. We are to have freshness with the re-constructed troupe; some of the ladies, we are told, are not only talented, but lavish in the display of their charms, which is a fortuitous circumstance for the old sinners in the front row of orchestra seats, not to say anything about the youthful scallywags who know where the best places are from which to obtain a good sight of the charming spectacle. We mentioned, a few weeks ago, that a live New York manager was prospecting in the far off eastern clime for a troupe of Nautch girls, with which to add to our felicity the coming season; but as if to dovetail with the speculation, some of our pious papers volunteer the information that these Nautch girls will disappoint us, because they wear pantalets, fastened around the ankles, but that their dresses are open in front, and their busts exposed to the waist. Now this is all a waste of words, on the part of our pious friends, and instead of a disappointment, the Nautch girls will be an agreeable surprise, for while the admirers of animated nature have seen a great deal of the latter exhibition, they have not seen as much at the other end of the line as their depraved appetites desired, so with the Nautch girls in their Egyptian costume a most attractive sensation is in store for our evil passions, provided our live manager is alive enough to secure the substance ere the shadow fades, or something like that. Dear, dear, wouldn't they make a revolution in theatricals! Why, with the first success of the Egyptians, troupes of Nubian girls would be produced to order in every part of the country, with all the native costumes and exposures and free and easy poses and soforth. What! But the blondes will answer very well until they are eclipsed by the belles of the east. In the meantime, we will make rhymes about

THE BLONDES REVIVED.

Ye burlesque actress is to all
A pleasure that ne'er lessens,
And one who most proverbs gains
Just through her charming presence;
And then, besides, when on the stage,
Each cunning little fay
Doth often put on pants to show
Who gives her a bouquet.

Like heavy ladies, they are set
Much given to tragic ranting,
But then in chanting songs they prove
Resistless enchanting;
Their acts oft exciting are
When aided by their dancing,
And never do they fail to make
The audience most entrancing.

They have an air of nonchalance
That tickles every sense,
So with their gay and dashing style
One cannot take of offence;
Sometimes the business of the play
Her charming contour drapes,
But mostly each one shapes her course,
Of course to dress in "shapes."

Their business is to ridicule
All follies, and to scoff,
If fashion should give an odd clothes,
Why they must take them off!
Their ridicule is harmless, though,
And only made in sport,
So may the world be caught by them,
And made to pay it court.

The foregoing lines were prepared by moonlight, with cats and colicky infants making terrible music in our ears; therefore, any little deviation from the orthodox may be attributed to this midnight attack by the infantry.....We labor under great difficulties in our endeavors to engineer this amusement department. It would amuse, as well as astonish our reader to peruse some of the letters which are sent to our theatrical editors, interrogating them concerning matters that have no more to do with the show business than pill boxes have to do with astronomy. Before us lies a note from some unhappy genius, who writes to know whether or not the difficulties between certain officials in charge of the Methodist Book Concern have been finally settled. Now this is a concern of course, of ours. To get ye editor afflicted at the bar of public opinion is not new things, nor are errors or shortcomings confined to any denomination. "There are black sheep in every fold." We are mindful of the fact that editors are but human beings, with the same bestirments and the same liability to err as the rest of us, and although the denunciations which we have heard launched at the theatrical profession from many a pulpit have often afforded us food for grave reflection, we are not disposed to retaliate, if we can avoid it, by any reflection upon the misconduct of clergymen, as we occasionally have the opportunity to do. Let the dear brethren bail their own row and we will paddle our own canoe.....

A FRIEND AND BROTHER.

Two friends of ours, the other day, in our office got a storming. Said one, "I hear that on the stage a negro is performing;
He's negro, in my judgment, for the stage was ever fitted;
How do you think such a thing as this should ever be permitted?"
Said t'other, "I can't decide, but it is my impression
That allowed, the negro will give color to the profession."

"Our Jim" has been cogitating his brains over a conundrum which a super friend of his propounded to him a few evenings ago. It was this:—"Why is a raw tomato, thrown at a dead beat on the stage, like a boil on a man's body?" The boy was unable to solve it until we explained to him that "both were likely to come to a head." Then, now I see, James," he said, "I didn't think of that, but I'll ask all the fellers, and treat 'em to clam soup, and beer, but not one of 'em had gumption enough to know what it was." Now, boss, I'd like to ask another little question, while we're at it and no one haint a-lookin'." "Go ahead, Jimmy," "What is the difference between a theatrical manager and a showman, or what's even a showman and a showman's living." "As we over you can make either give that, Master Jimmy, we must know so much about one of the other, we must plead ignorance, and, like the man who got caught stealing a ham, give it up." "Well, now, I'm just smart enough to know all about it—the steamboat, you see, is always fast when she's loose, and the gal is always loose when she's fast, see?" "Yes, but it seems that we have heard something like it before." "If you have, you must a been among the nymphs, for that's where I heard it. "James, we fear that you are growing fast and loose together. You had best sail to your own little bed, in future, if you wish to be virtuous."

.....In speaking of the new theatre now in course of erection at Fourteenth street and Broadway, we remarked that it was put up by Mr. Butler, and, it is reported, Sheridan Shook. "Sheridan shook?" inquired a visitor just from Squedunk Court House, "what did he shake about? Was it too expensive for him?" We took him up to Chris. Connor's, put a lump of ice on his head and a julep in his diaphragm, and sent him home by the cheapest conveyance, as New York is no place for such people.....The papers are at last beginning to find out that Charlotte Cushman is really to appear on the stage again. When we first made the announcement, a few weeks ago, some of our contemporaries ridiculed us. Cushy is coming, though she is to show in Booth's.....'Bertha" made a big hit at the Bowery last week; the house was a jam on the opening night, and it was difficult to get a perch a few minutes after "Bertha" commenced. This little screed shows to what depths funny people are compelled to go in order to make a little point. We are ashamed of it ourselves, but such as we have, etc.....We have dished up a great deal of poetry in our time, but we doubt much if we ever immortalized the public's most obedient servant, the supe, in verse. He is worthy of considerable laudation, is our various friend, the supe; we esteem him for the dangers he has run, the game he freely ventured the noble Moor; we revere him for his versatility of talent, and his great shrewdness in mailing up promiscuous mobs, and generating spontaneous riots; we honor him for his unselfishness and innocence; though his legs are bowed, and his knees knock together, yet he never shirks the tights when duty calls—he is ever ready to throw himself into the breach, yea, into a pair of breeches, but we have sounded his praises in prose—let us attempt, in poetry, to do justice to

YE SUPE.

In nearly all theatricals
Ye faithful "supe" appears,
Performing his allotted part
Mid universal jeers;
He can't get off in the "profesh"—
(Kind reader do not scoff)—
If he endeavors to "get on,"
They tell him to "get off."

The "starr" reefs his name until
Ye "supe" is in a "stew,"
Nobody gives him anything,
Unless it is a "cue."
The "star" regards him with contempt,
And at him wildly glares.
While often from the carpenter
He gets a parting "curse."

He oft severs his throat with juice
Whose liquid he wants to die,
And laughs when he should cry;
A faithful serf or vassal, he's
Most perfectly at home,
Although his conduct as a "supe"
Will make the actors "foam."

Yopes him as an office boy
Many managers have tried,
They drive the "supe" officio wild
With superficial "chaff"
Subway he rises above them all
And with his bowels as "scary man,"
Strikes terror to the soul.

City Summary.

VERY LARGE AUDIENCES have been in attendance during the past week at the Bowery Theatre, being attracted thither to witness the representation of Charles Foster's dramatic sketch, lately published in a popular weekly newspaper of this city. The drama, which is in four acts, is entitled "Bertha, the Sewing Machine Girl." It is highly sensational and crowded with effective incidents, which follow each other in rapid succession. It was well acted, the characters being fitted to the members of the company. Philip Hamilton, a poor young man, the lover and protector of Bertha Bascomb, was acted in a truly manly manner by W. Marden. Charles Foster, in his impersonation of Jasper Carter, a rich merchant of a philanthropic, generous nature, was quiet and correct. David Carter, a villain, who uses every art to make Bertha a victim of his unholy passion, was effectively acted by J. Whatar. P. Connolly gave a realistic picture of the New York butcher boy, whose rough exterior covers a heart honest and susceptible of the tenderest emotions. Mr. Manley was quite effective in his delineation of the meretricious and impudent proprietor of a sewing machine establishment. Maurice, a friend of Joe Carson, the son of the last named, a genteel villain, who is supplied most lavishly with money by his grasping father, and who thinks it fine sport to betray the young girls in his father's establishment, was successful in his acting. E. Barry, as Comrade Bascomb, the father of Bertha, acted several parts most correctly with much freedom and ease. Miss Howson, in the character of Bertha, during her absence from the boards, acted the character of Jack Rivers, a mendicant, similar to that of old Tomlin "after Dark," in a very artistic manner. His make up was excellent; every movement and gesture was full of character, and bore evidence of close study. It was one of the best pieces of acting we have witnessed upon the New York stage for a long time. George France, as Joe Jigger, a sailor, who offers to create consternation among the evening, especially in the court room scene, at the close of the second act. Mr. Walsh, as the Judge, bore a striking resemblance to one of our well known police magistrates, and delivered his lines in an impressive manner. The character of Bertha was charmingly acted by Mrs. W. G. Jones. The portraiture was carefully drawn, and ever kept within the bounds of nature. There is one charm about the acting of this conscientious artist that never fails to please. Whatever part may be assigned her, whether or no it be worthy of her artistic skill, she acts it with as much earnestness, feeling and skill as though it had been written especially for her. And for this conscientious discharge of her duty to the public she is deserving of high commendation. The success of the present play is due in no small degree to this artist's efforts. Miss Polly Booth, who had a very disagreeable part to act, displayed much energy and power of dissimulation. Miss Millie Sackett added to the importance of the somewhat unimportant part assigned her by her various acting. Mrs. Connolly, as Mrs. Bascomb, was all that could be desired, and Mrs. E. B. Holmes made quite a character of Miss Pinch, the spinster forewoman of uncertain age. Her make up was outre, and her acting in the court-room scene created much laughter, being so natural that in her persecution of Bertha, upon the witness stand, she was greeted with hisses, which were of course directed toward the assumed character and not the lady or her acting—in reality being a high compliment. The drama was preceded by the farce of the "Jolly Cobbler," with George France and Millie Sackett in the principal characters; also by Milburn's songs, which were well received. During the evening Tom Bolas sang several Dutch songs. Many persons were turned from the doors unable to procure admission during the early part of the week, and seats were in demand during the entire week. We think an error is committed in making the performances so long. If they could close about eleven o'clock we opine the audiences would be fully satisfied. The majority of the patrons of this theatre are compelled to rise at an early hour in the morning, and if the usual hours alloted to rest are encroached upon they feel it the next day, and are apt to absent themselves from the theatre thereafter in consequence. T. G. Riggs, a popular actor, who is most happy in his delineations of the idiosyncracies of the Celtic race, will shortly commence an engagement in a new and original drama entitled "Shin Fane," which has been written expressly for him by J. F. Poole.

MR. H. HOLLY DAVENPORT AND WIFE, the latter professionally known as Miss Minnie McClellan, arrived in the city on August 8th, from Galveston, Texas. From Dolly's own lips we learn the particulars of his accident. On the evening preceding the day when he intended sailing for New York a heavy storm prevailed, driving the surf of the sea into the town, and the gas of the Washington Hotel, where he was residing, was extinguished. Groping along one of the passage ways in the dark, and thinking he was in the hall way, he stepped on the flight of stairs, falling to the bottom and breaking his leg at the knee joint, the knee pan being severed in three places. He was confined to his room for seven weeks. During his illness he met with much kindness from prominent people in that city, two instances of which we take the liberty of reciting. Mr. J. H. Collett, the landlord of the Washington Hotel, sent Dolly a bill for board of himself and wife, receipted, and written across the bottom, "Please accept above, with the compliments of J. H. Collett." The surgeon, Dr. E. Randall, who attended him, presented a bill for $150, with a presentation credit of $100 endorsed thereon, leaving only $50 to be paid, probably less than the actual cost of the medicines. Dolly has so far recovered that he has abandoned the use of crutches and now walks with a cane. Some two or three months must probably elapse ere he will be able to resume his profession.

JOHN H. JACK, an excellent representative of old men characters, is to take a benefit at San Francisco Minstrel Hall, on Saturday evening, Aug. 19th. A portion of the bill will consist of one act of "Henry the Fourth," in which Mr. Jack will act Falstaff, and the drama entitled "The Last Man," in which he will act Geoffrey Dale. The latter piece has not been performed in this city for many years. The character of Geoffrey Dale was a favorite one with the late William Rufus Blake, whose impersonation thereof was most artistic and natural. As Mr. Jack excels in pathetic parts, we fancy there will be no little curiosity to see him in this role.

THE MARTENS FAMILY—Mons. and Mme. Martens, with Mlle. Gretchen—the eccentric Tyroleans, famous for their original "Duet des Chats," left Liverpool, Eng., by the City of Brooklyn, Aug 10th, for this city, where they are engaged to act at the Olympic Theatre in "Humpty Dumpty."

MISS OLIVE LOGAN has returned from Europe after a three months' absence, during which time she visited England, France, Germany and Switzerland. She is now preparing her new lecture, entitled "Nice Young Men," and arranging her tour for the coming season. Her address can be found in our advertising columns.

H. R. TRESDALE wishes us to state that he has not been engaged at the New Varieties Theatre, New Orleans, La., as has been erroneously reported in other papers.

MILTON NOBLES was in the city during the past week.

THOMAS E. MORRIS has been engaged as business manager at the Grand Opera House for the coming season.

N. C. FORRESTER was in the city during the past week.

T. E. MCDONOUGH has returned from Europe and will travel with C. W. Couldock, the coming season, as business manager.

AUSTRALIA can now be reached from New York in thirty-one days. A new line of steamers makes the passage from San Francisco, Cal., in twenty-four days, and the passage to the latter place, by rail, occupies seven. Morris Simmonds is already negotiating for stars to play in Melbourne.

AT WOOD'S MUSEUM George C. Boniface acted the chief characters in "David Garrick" and "Robert Macaire" on Monday, Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday evenings of the past week, and on Friday and Saturday evenings "Wallace, the Hero of Scotland," and "Aladdin" were performed. At the matinee on Saturday "David Garrick" and the burlesque of "Aladdin" were presented. At the other usual matinee John Hall's burlesque company acted in "Aladdin" and "My Turn Next." As there was no novelty in the performances we need only say that the attendance has been fair.

AT TONY PASTOR'S OPERA HOUSE during the first three evenings of the past week the "Dead Boxer" was given, followed by a "Lean of a Lover." On Thursday and Friday evenings the "Flower Girl of Paris," and "Joe Kidd" were performed; on Saturday evening the "Flower Girl of Paris" and the ring scene from the "Dead Boxer." Of the week was moderate. This evening, August 14th, W. H. Whatley, an excellent actor and a favorite with the Bowery audience, will commence an engagement in east side population, will commence an engagement in an entirely new play entitled the "Black Band."

THE SUMMER SEASON at the Olympic Theatre terminated on Saturday evening, Aug. 12th. Johnny Allen acted as stage manager during the week. The forthcoming production of "Schneider" during the week. The forthcoming production of "Surprise Party" rendered it necessary to close the theatre for a short time, that the carpenters and scenic artists might have full scope for their work. The pantomime is announced for production on Aug. 26th, when the fall and winter season will be inaugurated.

AT WALLACK'S THEATRE " Elfie; or, The Cherry That I Am," was withdrawn after the performance of Saturday evening, August 12th. On Monday night Mr. Pendale, who plays Bob Brown, resumed his old part and the piece was played for the remainder of the engagement of Charles Wyndham's Criterion Comedy Co. has been postponed until Wednesday evening, August 16th, in consequence of their late arrival in this city from Europe. The opening night consists of a new burlesque of "Miss Beard," produced by Lydia Thompson. The theatre will remain closed on Monday and Tuesday evenings.

J. A. ZIMMERMAN, the courteous treasurer of Niblo's Garden, received his annual benefit as that theatre on Saturday, Aug. 12th, performances having been given both afternoon and evening. A fair attendance greeted the matinee performances, and in the evening, notwithstanding the high temperature that prevailed, a very large audience was present. At the matinee performances the "Lady of Lyons" was acted with the following cast:

Claude Melnotte..Edwin Adams	First Officer.....J. Mackey
Col. Damas.....J. H. Jack	Second Officer.....Rose
Beauseant.....Milnes Levick	Third Officer.....W. Rose
Glavis.....C. A. McKenzie	Pauline.....Miss Louise Sanford
M. Deschappelles.....W. L. Street	Mme. Deschappelles.....Miss Postal
M. Deschappelles J. W. Bristow	Widow Melnotte.....Miss Postal
Servant.....E. Dudley

The performance was an excellent one and gave general satisfaction. In the evening the performances commenced with O'Keefe's comedy, entitled "Wild Oats," cast as follows:

Rover.....Edwin Adams	Banks.....S. S. Crisfield
Sir George Thunder...J. H. Jack	Trap.....Rose
Harry Thunder...C. A. McKenzie	Twitch.....Mackey
Ephraim Smooth...C. H. Morton	Landlord.....Street
John Lump.....W. L. Street	Lady Amaranth.....Miss Postal
Farmer Ashfield.....J. W. Bristow	Amelia.....Mrs. J. W. Bristow
Sim.....Harry Clifford	Jane.....Miss Marion Meadows
Lamp.....E. E. Collier

It was well acted, and the audience applauded lavishly at various stages of the performance. An olio entertainment followed, in which Miss Emma Howson sang the "Last Kiss," composed by Signor Operti, which was followed by a duet from "Elixir d'Amore," by Miss Howson and Signor Operti, the latter making his American debut on the stage upon that occasion. He has a good voice and sang with much effect, being most enthusiastically greeted upon his appearance and at the close of his performance. Johnny O'Neil followed with the "Quintessence of Old Virginia," and Mark Rasdell sang the medley song which was received with so much favor during the run of "Across the Continent." The performances concluded with a protean farce, entitled the "Widow's Strategy," in which Lillie Vic acted three characters and sang a number of songs. She was assisted by her mother, Mrs. Virginia Donaldson, who acted Amelia Lightheart, a young widow. The child is talented, and acted the various characters assigned her in a natural, vivacious and sprightly manner, exhibiting a degree of intelligence far beyond her tender years. "Across the Continent" was withdrawn after the performance of Aug. 11th. The theatre will remain closed during the present week, and the fall and winter season will be inaugurated on Monday night, Aug. 14th, when Miss Emma Howson will commence an engagement, acting in "Fritz, Our Cousin German."

W. HORACE LINGARD, MISS ALICE DUNNING and MISS DICKEY LINGARD arrived in this city, from California, last week.

THE FALL AND WINTER SEASON at Booth's Theatre, will be inaugurated this, Monday evening, Aug. 14th, when Lotta will commence an engagement in the dual role of Little Nell and the Marchioness.

GEORGE H. COES will be the stage manager of the Union Square Theatre, during the coming season.

THE PARK THEATRE, Brooklyn, after a brief illness, at the age of 25 years. He was for some time the doorkeeper at Tony Pastor's Opera House. The funeral is to take place from his mother's residence, 353 Third avenue, at one o'clock on Tuesday, Aug. 15th, and will be attended by the B. P. O. of Elks.

RIGGS AND FITZSIMMONS, dramatic agents, 201 Broadway, are prepared to negotiate engagements for the coming season for Miss Pauline Rossa, the prima donna of the Imperial Ballet since Aug. 28th. They have purchased the right from C. M. Barras to produce the "Black Crook," and have also arranged with the Meech Brothers for the use of the scenery, properties and wardrobe. See advertisement.

COL. T. A. BROWN, dramatic agent, 718 Broadway, is prepared to negotiate engagements for Ines St. John, either to appear in original dramas or for readings; H. L. Morris, Dutch comedian; Susan Denin, actress, who will return to America early in September; Stiles and Phelps, double song and dance artists; J. H. Laine, advance agent; Montclair, equestrienne and actress; and H. C. Burton and Minnie Rainforth, in their specialties. He also wants artists for the Howard Athenæum, Boston, Mass., and is prepared to rent Wall's Opera House, Washington, D. C., on to let it on sharing terms. For further particulars see the advertisement.

C. E. DUGANE left the city August 14th for Boston, Mass. He will shortly take a dramatic company through the New England States and thence go through the oil regions.

HARRY CUNNINGHAM, dramatic agent, 638 Broadway, states through his advertisement that Mlle Marie Zoe can be engaged through him. This lady has purchased the sole right to play "Bertha; or, the Sewing Machine Girl," in several states.

W. REED, advance agent, recently with Adam Forepaugh's Circus, arrived in the city during the past week—his first visit during three years.

W. W. FOWLER, business manager for the Berger Family of Bell Ringers, left this city for Jackson, Mich., on the 14th inst., where the family are now enjoying their summer vacation at their home, and where they purpose remaining until Sept. 11th, when they commence their annual tour at Jonesville, Mich. This party will travel south during the coming season, but will return to New York in the early spring, and play an engagement of several weeks duration at Steinway Hall.

Dramatic.

CONCERNING THEATRICAL AFFAIRS in Chicago, Ill., our correspondent sends the following report, dated August 11th:—"The Katie Putnam troupe brought their season to a close on the 5th ult., presenting, for the last performance, 'Little Nell' and 'The Marchioness,' with Miss Putnam in the title roles. The season, taken as a whole, was a financial success. During the performance Mr. Blaisdell was presented by Dan. T. Murphy, in behalf of Messrs. R. M. Hooley, Dan O'Hara and a few influential friends, with a handsome gold headed cane, silk scarf and pin. Mr. Murphy expressed the good wishes of the donors and the other citizens of Chicago in a humorous speech, to which Mr. Blaisdell responded happily and with great feeling. Mr. B. started for Boston the following evening, accompanied to the depot by a large number of friends, professionals and members of the press. Miss Putnam and Edwin Browne started for Lake Superior on the 8th, where they propose to devote a couple of weeks to rest and recreation.....The McKee Rankin comedy company commenced a brief season at this place on the 7th, presenting for the opening bill 'Dora' and 'Black Eyed Susan.' Notwithstanding the thermometer was away up among the nineties, there was a large audience present, and Mr. Rankin makes an admirable Farmer Allen and plays the part with unusual effectiveness. The character of Dora received every attention possible from the hands of Miss Kitty Blanchard. Her careful and conscientious rendering of the same was, throughout the entire play, thoroughly effective, and for her pains she has received the highest commendation from the audiences. Mary Morrison by Miss Violet Campbell (Mrs. Belvil Ryan) is worthy of creditable mention. The other characters are only passably enacted by M. V. Lingham and W. B. Laurens. As William in 'Black-Eyed Susan' Miss Blanchard is particularly happy, displaying a taste for burlesque acting that is thoroughly pleasing. Katie Mayhew's appearance, after a few months' absence from our boards, in the role of Susan, was greeted with loud and prolonged applause. Her rendition of the character was a well deserved success, and her singing and dancing form a very pleasing feature of the performance. C. S. Stanley has made a decided hit in the character of Captain Crosstree. Mr. Jennings played Doggrass in his usual praiseworthy style. Dame Hatley is capitally acted by John Marble. The minor characters are, as a whole, well rendered. There has been no change in the bill throughout the week. Mr. L. Parrenbeck has been tendered a testimonial benefit, to take place on the 17th, Messrs. Aiken and Hooley generously tendering the Opera House for the occasion..... The Wyndham company is giving us "School" this week, to uniformly good houses. The many defects noticeable the first night of its representation have been obviated, and now the piece is running smoothly. Saturday night closes their regular season; but they will remain four nights next week, which will be devoted to benefits, Miss Cowell's benefit taking place on the 14th, Mr. Gidden's the 15th, Miss Goodall's the 16th, and Mr. Wyndham's the 17th. At the close of the season, the company will take a short vacation.....Frank Aiken has returned from the east and announces the following people engaged for the fall and winter season at Hooley's Opera House commencing on the 20th. Messrs. J. H. Fitzpatrick, Frank Lawlor, M. C. Daly, S. L. Knapp, George Archer, Harry Gilbert, David Genesse, J. C. Morrison, J. E. Vincent, J. C. Prager, the Misses Augusta Dargon, Annie Castleton, Annie Tyrone, Alcide Gerome and Mrs. M. C. Daly. Mr. Richard Smith as scenic artist.....The work upon McVicker's New Theatre is nearly finished, and, if nothing serious occurs, it will be in complete order for the opening, which is announced for the 30th. When completely completed it will be a handsome structure and an ornament to the Garden City. The building is four stories high, with a French roof, and the front very handsomely ornamented with statues of Hope, Faith and Charity placed in a large niche in the centre, and a bust of Shakespeare over the entrance, with full length figures of tragedy and comedy on either side. A spacious hall, or entrance, with a neat, cozy box office directly in the centre, leads to a broad semi-circular lobby surrounding the parquet circle, with the manager's office to the right and a ladies' retiring room at the right. Six doorways conduct you to the parquet circle, which has thirteen aisles, two places of exit on either side and a sufficient number of small windows for a free ventilation. Several blank walnut sofas, seating five persons each, upholstered with crimson plush, are placed about the lobby. There are two boxes in this portion of the house, which are to be erected over with landing rooms to each. The dress circle is reached by ascending a commodious double stairway with heavy carved railings. From the lobby into the circle there are four entrances. This portion of the house is to be painted similar to the parquet, with the exception of the lining, which will contain two retiring rooms, one for ladies and the other for gentlemen, with drinking rooms in addition. The family circle will have two boxes, one to be used as a dressing room, the other for the armory. The upper tier, or family circle, is reached by a double stairway from the dress circle stairway, and will be finished exactly the same as the lower portion of the house. There will not be a poor seat in the house. The dome is octagon in shape, highly frescoed, with a large prismatic chandelier depended from above, with eighty lights. The prevailing color of the entire auditorium will be gold, lilac, crimson and white. The stage will be the same size of the old one, but arranged in a manner so that it can be thrown open in full size, an area of 60 feet square. This department will contain all the latest improvements, with an entire set of new scenery, and a handsome pictorial drop curtain. In the proscenium arch will be represented the four seasons. .....The Centennial Anniversary of Walter Scott's birthday is to have a peculiarly fitting celebration in this city at Hooley's Opera House on the 14th, 15th, and 16th inst. The programme comprises four dramatic entertainments, 'Rob Roy,' 'Guy Mannering,' and 'Heart of Midlothian.' Nearly all the prominent actors in the city have volunteered their services for the occasion.

THE WALNUT STREET THEATRE, Philadelphia, Pa., will be re-opened for the fall and winter season this, Monday, evening, the 14th inst., with Boucicault's new drama of "Elfie; the Maid of the Cherry Tree Inn." The company engaged for the performance of this drama is one of unusual strength, including Mr. Charles Wheatleigh as Lord Love, Mr. Osmond Tiffany as Jem Chirrup and Miss Ella Gerson as Elfie. In looking over the long and attractive list of stars announced to appear here, the public has reason to rejoice that this theatre continues to be under such able and energetic management as that of Mr. Thomas J. Hemphill.

AT SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, the programmes presented during the last week included "The Scamps of the Great City" on Monday and Tuesday evenings; "The Duel After the Masquerade" and "Black Eyed Susan," on Wednesday, Thursday and Friday evenings. On the evening of Saturday, the 12th inst., a complimentary benefit was tendered to Mr. A. R. Wyburn, the manager of the dramatic company now performing at this establishment, the programme consisting of "Oliver Twist' and "Dick Turpin and Tom King." Business has been fair at this house. On Monday evening, the 14th inst., Mr. J. B. Roberts is announced to commence an engagement—limited to six nights—appearing in "Bel-phegor," "A New Way to Pay Old Debts," "Willow Copse," "The Robbers" and "The Apostate."

THE SANGER COMPANY will play a brief season in Lockport, N. Y., August 11th, and is billed to play six nights in Rochester, N. Y., commencing the 14th, thence to Rome for one week.

VILLA AND MINER'S comic opera and comedy troupe commencee their season in Danbury, Conn., August 31st. The company is as follows:—The Misses Agnes Wallace, Aggie Wood, G. A. Florence, Gertie Granville, Sabra Denton, Annie Pierce, Minnie Homer, Ruth Stubin, Messrs. S. B. Villa, Charles Webster, J. R. Buckley, C. O. Hall, C. W. Kimble, B. F. Henry, George Curtis and Walter Eastbrook. The Newport Silver Cornet Band, George A. Florence leader, will accompany the troupe during their season, and Harry Miner will act as business manager.

THE LISA WEBER BURLESQUE COMPANY performed at the Academy of Music, Buffalo, N. Y., during the past week.

J. H. STODDART and a dramatic company are announced to play the "Long Strike" in Albany, N. Y., August 14th and 15th.

JOHN COLLINS, supported by a dramatic company, is announced to perform in Albany, N. Y., August 16th and 17th.

JOHNNY WARD, a favorite with the public of Rochester, N. Y., took a benefit there on August 12th.

AT THE NEW OPERA HOUSE, Rochester, N. Y., the following stars have been secured for the coming season:—Charles Mathews, Edwin Forrest, F. S. Chanfrau, Dominick Murray, W. W. Lemingwell, J. K. Emmet, O. D. Byron, G. Swain Buckley, Edwin Adams, H. T. Stetson, Miss Rose Eytinge and Miss Annie Clarke and her company, Mrs. Chanfrau, Little Nell and Miss Dolly Bidwell. The season will commence August 28th, with the engagement of Charles Mathews.

COPIES of a dramatization of "A Terrible Temptation" can be had of E. M. Leslie, the dramatizer, who advertises.

M

occupied by MORRIS. There are three good benefits in Cincinnati this week, which is an excellent one for the time, viz.: Wood's Theatre, Wednesday, and Miss Vernon's. The Academy has been closed all the low tide of fifteen weeks, and the hall is growing well on for.....Charles Carroll and Billy Williams continue the leading attractions at the Race Street Theatre. Miss Wilkins is certainly one of the sweetest vocalists that has ever been in this hall, and is also a piquant actress. The musical farce of 'Jenny Lind' has been dressed up by Correll, under the name of 'Lucretia Boards Here,' and Miss Williams takes the lady character nicely, supported by Correll as the Baron, Fred. McAvoy, Marsh Adams and James Finley. Correll also does a resonant bone solo in the olio, and Mr. and Mrs. McAvoy appear to advantage in their specialties. A new piece, by McAvoy, is in preparation, entitled 'All Hallow Eve.' Tom Warfield and Annie Vernon withdrew from the company last week, going to the new Olympic. Marsh Adams leaves at the close of this week, having accepted an engagement with the Hart, Eyman and Barney party. His place will be supplied by Johnny Wilson.....The Apollo is running a German company, Mollie St. Martin being the only English speaking performer, and she don't speak, she dances. They are short to engage some fresh variety players, however.....Tony Pastor's company is to occupy Wood's Theatre next week.

THE FOURTH SEASON at the Olympic Theatre, Brooklyn, L. I., is to be inaugurated this evening, August 14th. The chief performers announced are the following:—The Zittetta troupe of male and female artists; Prof. Gertani, M'lle Pagani, James Collins and Martha Wren, M'lle Gorgie, Miss Ida Greenfield, Fanny Lucille, Sallie Irving, Kennedy Bros., Master Nell, Herman, Purdy and Mack.

THE ALHAMBRA, Philadelphia, Pa., had important accessions to its company last week, securing the services of Miss Emma Alford, Sidney Franks and Fattie Stewart, thus attracting a better attendance than heretofore. The programme included serio-comic vocalism by Miss Emma Alford, who is deservedly a great favorite here; the burlesques of "Gem's from the Opera," "Going to the Races," "Last of the Mohicans" and "Smike and Mose," in all of which Fattie Stewart sustained prominent characters with much humorous ability. Sidney Franks appeared in comic vocalism; Murphey and Egbert in double song and dances, the programme being pleasantly varied by feats of magic performed by the Flaskeys Brothers, and banjo solos by Tommy Turner. On the 14th inst. an entirely new programme will be presented, Charles L. Davis appearing in his fighting changes, in addition to Miss Alford, Sidney Franks, Fattie Stewart and company. The Female Minstrel act will be a feature of the programme. This establishment was advertised to be sold at Sheriff's sale on the 7th inst., but the sale was postponed for a few weeks by the parties interested.

EXTENSIVE ALTERATIONS are being made in the Philadelphia Varieties, Philadelphia, which, when completed, will present a much improved appearance. The fall and winter season will commence on the 26th inst., a very large and talented variety troupe being already engaged.

AT VALE'S WINTER GARDEN, the dancing and singing of Miss Mary Frazer and the comicalities of Charles Davis delighted the habitues of that establishment during the week ending the 12th inst. Mlle. Eugenie, danseuse, will make her appearance there on the 14th inst.

AT THE OLYMPIC THEATRE, Chicago, Ill., business continues uniformly good, despite the hot weather. Clara Butler closed on the 8th, and will rest for a couple of weeks. Nellie Clifford's engagement ceased the same evening. She opens in Cleveland next week. Viola Clifton appeared on the 7th and has created a fine impression; her songs and rapid changes are the recipients of numerous encores. Josephine Walby returned on the 7th. Sam Cole, an old favorite, also appeared at the same time.

CONCERNING THE VARIETY HALLS in St. Louis, Mo., our correspondent sends the appended report, dated Aug. 11th:—"Business at the Varieties Theatre continues good. Sturges and Armstrong appeared in a new double act this week entitled 'Good Enough,' which takes well. Mr. Joe Woods in his comic singing, Gen. Grant, Jr., in his seasongs and dances, Ettie Barker in her bouquet of melodies, In petite Emma in her fancy dances, and Ed Barker and Mlle. Eveline in a beautiful duet, are all well received and make up a fine olio. The performances concluded with Signor Constantine's comic pantomime entitled 'The Red Gnome,' with Signor Constantine as the famous warrior, General Grant as the Red Gnome, J. W. Wilson as Alfred and Mlle. Eveline as Eugenia. 'Dame Trot and Her Comical Cat' is announced for the 14th inst. Mr. Charley Sturges leaves on the 19th to open at the Front Street Theatre, Baltimore, where his partner, Charley Armstrong, expects soon to join him.....At Scott's New Varieties the new company is meeting with success. Burly and Marr are doing 'Nettie Rea,' a very beautiful song and dance, this week. George Wilson and Jimmy Quinn are on the ends in the first part. Miss Lucy Hall's vocalisms are nicely received with favor, and are also those of Miss Mayling. La belle Blanche opened on Sunday night, the 6th inst., in songs and dances and a sailor's hornpipe, and has been well received. Gilfoil and Rouke close this week, and open at Allen's Varieties Saturday night. Miss Nina DuBois closed this morning, being discharged by the management for insubordinate conduct.....Billy Carroll, of the Walnut Street Theatre, Kansas City, is still in the city, actively engaged in making arrangements for the re-opening, which takes place August 28th.....Three new appearances are announced at Joe Henry's Sixth Street Varieties—A. S. Caspar, J. J. Sprague and Miss Flora Bazaine. Mr. Caspar assumes the stage management. Miss Maggie Louise is engaged to appear as Frailty, in the 'Corsican,' next Sunday, the 13th. Sprague and Mack are doing a new song and dance this week, entitled 'She Left Me at the Door,' written especially for them by Joe Woods—music by Lee Loeb. Business is good.....Allen's Varieties is announced to open Saturday night, the 12th. Dave Williams is stage manager.....Professor Navoeni, the well known violinist, arrived in the city this morning from the south, and is expected to open at Scott's Varieties next week.....Ante Florence, the jig dancer, is also in the city; she opens at the Walnut Street Theatre, Kansas city, on Sept. 4th.....The Leslie Brothers, gymnasts, left this week for Boston, to open at the St. James Theatre.....Mr. Harry Cavells, general comedian and song and dance man, arrived in town last week from Hemmings and Cooper's Circus.....Nell Rogers has returned from Chicago, and opens at Allen's Varieties."

ARTISTS and organizations are wanted for the St. James Theatre, Boston, Mass. Apply or address as directed in the advertisement.

JENNIE BENSON, song and dance artiste, and her child, la petite Maggie Benson, who also does song and dance acts, can be engaged. Address as per advertisement.

AT THE CRICKET, a variety theatre at Denver., Col., the following ladies and gentlemen were performing:—The Misses Carrie Duval, Lenny Palmer, Nellie Belmont, Messrs. J. Rickaby, Harry Spriggs, Charley Mulgro, George Dempster and Duvernay.

AT THE VARIETY THEATRE, Manistee, Mich., under the management of Carchran and Ferris, with John Myers, stage manager, and Prof. Bryan, leader of the orchestra, the following performers were the chief attractions the past week:—Ed. Chrissie, Johnny Taylor, George Burgess, W. Maloney, the Misses Florence De Vere and Lou Rainford.

CHAS. ARIZONA, balancer, with'eats of strength, etc., and Minnie Wa Wa, gymnast, can be engaged after Nov. 1st. Address care of this office.

THE BALLET AND BALLET MASTER engaged for the Front Street Theatre Comique, Baltimore, Md., are requested to assemble for rehearsal on Aug. 22d, and the dramatic and olio company on the 23d. Stars are also referred to the card in another column. The theatre opens on Aug. 28th.

A LADY SINGER is wanted by L. S. P., who can be addressed care of this office.

DICK GRAYBURN, who can be addressed as per advertisement, wants lady variety performers.

FROM INDIANAPOLIS, IND., our correspondent, "Vagrantes," writes under date of Aug. 11th, saying:—"Tony Pastor's Troupe succeeded in filling the Academy of Music with a large and appreciative audience on the 9th inst., who thoroughly enjoyed and loudly applauded the excellent programme presented. Johnny Wild, Frank Kerns and Frank Girard presented excellent sketches of plantation life. In the old but ever entertaining sketch entitled 'One, Two, Three,' Johnny Wild caused side-splitting laughter by his comicalities. Charles Walters does an immense song and dance. The great Carleton presents sketches of Irish character in true national style, and in the scene of 'Barney's Courtship' is ably assisted by Miss Jenny Gilmer. Miss Annie Hindle has lately been added to the company and presented her highly finished male character songs to an Indianapolis audience for the first time. They met with unequivocal success. Miss Ada Wray and her banjo were welcomed as old friends like to be. Miss Kitty O'Neil's superior jig dancing fairly surprised every one, and peculiarity welcome was the weird old-country music with which a member of Tony's excellent orchestra accompanied her actions. Tony is a host in himself, and his comical songs gained round after round of applause. A few more nights of the performances of this troupe would have been appreciated.....At the Metropolitan Theatre the company has been but slightly altered, the old favorites, Eunice Dunlap, Emma Morton, Fanny Wood, Ada St. Clair, Maud Howard and Nellie Seymour, being received with unabated applause, from Williams, Ned Ranan and Charlie Adams are as popular as ever in their various scenes. Clog dancing has gained favor at this house—Mackin and Wilson doing excellent double business, and John Rushton pleasing all with his excellent dancing. The latter gentleman was to receive a benefit on the 11th inst., on which occasion he was advertised to dance a clog to fifteen different airs. Business is excellent, notwithstanding the hot weather."

"SLUMBERLAND," Buffalo, N. Y., has had large audiences. Melinda Nagle's Minstrels, who open each evening's entertainment, are good. The clog dancing by Miss Alice Somers, together with songs by the Misses Jessie Howard and Rosa Lee, during the present week have been well received. Miss Fannie Vilade made her first appearance on Monday evening, the 7th. Miss Patsy Jerome, serio-comic vocalist; Masters George and Willie, juvenile clog and song and dance artists; Miss Nellie Whitney, a Buffalo favorite; Harry Miller and M. B. Shimer are among the new faces who are expected next week." So wrote our correspondent on August 12th.

TONY PASTOR and his variety troupe performed during the past week at Terre Haute, Ind., Indianapolis, and Louisville, Ky.; commence a week's performance at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, O., this evening, August 14th, and are billed ahead as follows:—Richmond, Ind., 21st; Dayton, O., 22d; Springfield, 23d; Columbus, 24th and 25th, and Zanesville, 26th.

THE ARTISTS engaged for the Brooklyn Opera House, Brooklyn, N. Y., are requested to assemble for rehearsal on August 20th, and those engaged for the Metropolitan Hall, Washington, D. C., on Aug. 26th. Variety performers are wanted for these houses at all times. See card in another column.

FOR SMITH'S OPERA HOUSE, East Saginaw, Mich., variety talent is wanted, as will be seen by the manager's card in another column, in which will also be found a list of the company at present engaged there.

THE LAURI TROUPE, Mubura, comic, and A. W. Mastin in his specialties, are billed to perform in Providence, R. I., August 16th, 17th, 18th and 19th.

MISS KATE BARROWS, the Kirafly Sisters, Charles Gardiner and his son, together with Mons. Blandowski's ballet and pantomime troupes, were the chief features at the Opera House, Baltimore, Md., during the past week. By reference to our advertising columns it will be seen that two lady vocalists and a number of corypheus for the ballet are wanted.

J. H. MILBURN, protean comique, vocalist, &c., advertises that he will shortly appear in a new act, and can be engaged.

ALBERT GILBERT, Ethiopian comedian, female impersonator, &c., can be addressed as per advertisement.

P. H. SEAMON, with his Peter Hontz Family, advertises that he can be engaged.

LEW L. PIKE is to open a theatre comique in New Haven, Conn., for the season, on September 11th. The building is now being refitted and painted.

Negro Minstrelsy.

HART, EYMAN AND BARNEY'S MINSTRELS are to return to Cincinnati September 11th, for two weeks, having engaged Mozart Hall for that time, which will be during the continuance of the "Great Industrial Exposition."

FRANK SCHMITT, minstrel performer, can be addressed care of this office.

HART, EYMAN AND BARNEY'S MINSTRELS opened at Wood's Theatre, Cincinnati, on the 7th, for one week. Our correspondent says of them:—"They had a fine initial audience, and have been doing an excellent warm weather business ever since. The impression they have made is equal to that of any company that has visited us, some of their acts being unique and original. An example of this is the 'Red Whiskey' act of Rae Rickey and Master Barney, which is an excellent piece of character acting. Rickey has perceptibly improved since he was here with Harrigan last winter. Add Ryman has been billed as one of the end men, but in point of fact has been acting as interlocutor, with Add Weaver and John Hart on the ends, who are ludicrously funny. The party has a very fair vocal corps in Messrs. Murphy, Signor Taylor and Heyer, claiming to be an English quartette. Master Barney's change in the skate dance and jigs of J. Jennings, and those solo, by Sig Valdeas and vice versa between the comic acts very nicely. They also do an improved version of the farce known as the 'Mutton Trial,' in which Ryman makes a capital hit at police court pettifoggers, and Hart as the Squire, Rickey as Flipper, and Barney as a Dutch character, are very efficient. Mr. Add Weaver's place company will join them here, owing to other engagements, going hence to Boston, I believe, and they will be strengthened by two new additions, viz.: Christmatus, the excellent song and dance artist, lately with Newcomb & Arlington, and Sarah Adams, the present stage manager of the Race Street Varieties, who will act as interlocutor, Ryman taking Weaver's place on the ends. Adams has a good voice and does fair characters. Each has been a leading member of the original 'Old Theatre Co.' The entire change of the troupe so far as fixed, is—Paris, Ky., Monday, 14th; Lexington, 15th; Frankfort, 16th; Louisville, 17th, 18th and 19th. Thence they go to Evansville and Indianapolis.

THE REGULAR MINSTREL SEASON will commence at the Dearborn Theatre, Chicago, on the 21st, with the following company:—Billy Rice, Harry Kennedy, Billy Cotton, J. H. Haverly, Smith, Lutz, Schofield and Harry Kelso, comicalians; Peasley and Fitzgerald, song and dance; Stevie Rogers, clog; Orrie Fredericks, J. Le Mont, C. Markham and Long, vocal quartet; Frank Kent, female impersonator. The performances on same evening, with Charles Hunnewell as leader; Wm. Van Rhee, business manager and Geo. S. Hackett, treasurer.

THE ELEVENTH STREET OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, Pa., is now undergoing extensive alterations and re-decoration with the view of opening early in September with a first class minstrel troupe, E. P. Dixey has been engaged in correspondence with the well known veteran manager, Charley White, for some time past, with the object of obtaining his co-operation in the management of the Eleventh Street Opera House, but as yet no definite arrangements have been made in regard thereto.

SIMMONS AND SLOCUM'S OPERA HOUSE, Philadelphia, Pa., is to be opened for the fall and winter season on Monday, the 28th inst., with a company strengthened in the vocal and instrumental departments and the addition of a popular comedian.

KIRWAN AND RANKIN'S HIBERNIAN MINSTRELS, recently organized, performed at Lynn, Mass., Aug. 12th, and are billed ahead as follows:—Salem, 14th; Lawrence, 15th; Lowell, 16th and 17th; Manchester, 18th and 19th; Nashua, N. H., 21st; Milford, Mass., 22d; Woonsocket, R. I., 23d; Providence, 24th and 25th; Dawtucket, 26th, and Boston, Mass., at the St. James Theatre, one week, commencing Aug. 28th. See their advertisement.

LEW BRIMMER'S BANJO MINSTRELS performed at Cohoskill, N. Y., Aug. 11th and 12th.

THE MORRIS BROTHERS' MINSTRELS for the coming season will be composed of the following performers:—Charley Sexton, "the great" Bernardo, W. A. Barlow, C. Lavalee, F. W. Prescott, Sadness, J. E. Holmes, Walter Bates, Charles H. Jones, Billy Emmett, Japanese Tommy, J. F. Barlow, George F. Charenden, Frank Campbell, W. Henri, C. W. Knowlton, J. McPhail and M. Keogh. Manager, Lon Morris; treasurer, Charles A. Morris. The company is called for rehearsal at Boston, Mass., August 23d, at 11 o'clock.

UNSWORTH'S MINSTRELS is the name of a new organization under the proprietorship of Unsworth, Eugene and G. W. H. Griffin, which, during the coming season, intend playing in the large towns in the immediate vicinity of New York, one night in each town, and repeating their visits to each town upon the same night of each week. The idea is a novel one. Eugene and Unsworth are rusticating at their country seat at Sherbrooke, C. E.

ARMORY OF CALIFORNIA MINSTRELS are billed to perform in St. Joseph, Mo., Aug. 23d and 24th; Atchison, Kansas, 25th; Leavenworth, 26th; Lawrence, 28th; and Topeka, 29th.

EDWARDS, TALBOT & PARKER'S MINSTRELS performed in Buffalo, N. Y., during a part of the past week.

DUPREZ & BENEDICT'S MINSTRELS performed at Indianapolis, Ind., Aug. 11th and 12th.

THE GEORGIA MINSTRELS are billed to perform at Elizabeth, N. J., August 18th; New Brunswick, 17th, and close their season at Trenton, 18th, after which they will re-organize with several European artists and commence their next tour September 4th.

BRYANT'S MINSTRELS performed in Troy, N. Y., August 11th; Albany, 12th, and are billed to appear at Syracuse 15th.

Circuses.

ONE OF THE GREATEST SUCCESSES ever achieved in the annals of the sawdust ring, has been accomplished the present season by P. T. Barnum's Museum, Menagerie and Circus. From the inception of the enterprise success has crowned its efforts. Mr. Barnum's name, in itself, has been a tower of strength, and to his direction and general control its success is due. There are few men that have the courage to invest nearly a half a million of dollars in so precarious a business, and to run it at a daily expense of nearly twenty-five hundred dollars. But Mr. Barnum had faith that the public would respond liberally to his appeal. One great success has followed another, ever to give the public a great deal for their money, and to fix the prices of admission at popular rates. But we doubt if he expected so great a success as has recently, in the State of Maine, been showered upon him. It is worthy of being recorded as equal to Jenny Lind's triumphal American tour. It had originally been the intention to make a tour with the great show as far east as Bangor, Me., and it was so announced, but subsequently they found that there were many bridges over which it was impossible for the large chariots to pass, and that the show would be obliged to make stands at several small towns, en route, which could not possibly pay the running expenses, even if every inhabitant attended, consequently it was decided that Lewiston, Me., should be the terminus of their eastern tour. The following letter, dated Winthrop, Me., July 30th, from a correspondent, will best convey the idea of the great interest and enthusiasm there manifested by the people:—

"The business in Maine has been immense, contrary to the predictions of showmen generally. Since entering the state, except at Brunswick, where it rained hard all day, they have been compelled to show three times daily to accommodate the vast crowds that flocked from every direction. While exhibiting at Gardiner and Augusta persons came all the way from Bangor. When they reached Waterville, a scene occurred which has never been equalled in this or any other country. The village was crowded with people who had come from the surrounding country, many of them traveling a distance of seventy-five miles, and all the morning crowds were pouring in from all points of the compass in carriages, wagons, ox carts and on foot. Near the city lends in an adjoining field were several large tents pitched, which had served to shelter the people the previous night who had come long distances and encamped there. The authorities of the village has taken the precaution to stop the sale of all spirituous liquors during the day, which had caused barrels of water and plenty of ice to be placed at the street corners, for the free use of all. Carts were provided at the expense of the village to constantly replenish the barrels. The early morning performance was commenced and it was found that they could not accommodate a tithe part of their patrons, and ere its close an excursion train of twenty-seven cars, crowded in every part, came in from Bangor, closely followed by another of seventeen cars from Belfast, losing the train connection. Here already large numbers of visitors, the manager was somewhat puzzled how to accommodate them. Finally it was decided to give a continuous exhibition, giving an act in the circus department every few minutes. This style of performance was kept up in rapid succession until nine o'clock in the evening, when a heavy shower of rain falling, afforded the manager an excuse to close the exhibitions. The men and horses were completely exhausted, and their path drive for forty-eight miles, Belfast to Winton, where they were to exhibit three times, they shipped all the ring horses by railroad, to give them an opportunity for much needed rest. On driving out of Augusta, on July 29th, they narrowly escaped an accident similar to the one which happened in New Jersey. One of the passenger wagons, with twelve passengers and having four horses attached, had driven down a steep hill; when suddenly they came upon a locomotive crossing the road immediately in front of them. The driver, with great presence of mind, suddenly pulled the horses to the right, making an abrupt turn, which overturned the wagon, breaking the arm of Mr. Summerfield, one of the business men, bruising several others, and injuring some of the horses. Joseph, the elephant, who was compelled to remain behind the show for a couple of days.

"We believe it is the first time on record that any circus has been compelled to give a continuous exhibition throughout the day and into the night to accommodate its patrons. This great show on its return trip performed at Rutland, Vt., Aug. 10th; Fair Haven, 11th; Whitehall, N. Y., 12th; and is billed ahead as follows:—Glens Falls, 14th; Saratoga, 15th; Schuylerville, 16th; Hoosic Falls, 17th; North Adams, Mass., 18th; Pittsfield, 19th; thence to Troy, Cohoes, Albany, Schenectady, Gloversville, Little Falls, Utica, Rome, Camden, Mexico, Baldwinsville, Syracuse, Auburn, Seneca Falls, Palmyra, Rochester, Brockport, Albion, Medina, Lockport, Niagara Falls and Buffalo. The living sea lions now on exhibition in New York city will shortly be added to the menagerie department.

STONE AND MURRAY'S CIRCUS exhibited at Walpole, N. H., August 8th; Keene, 9th; Brattleboro, Vt., 10th; Greenfield, Mass., 11th; Shelburne Falls, 12th, and is billed to perform at North Adams, 14th; Hoosick Falls, N. Y., 15th, and Bennington, Vt., 16th.

FOREPAUGH'S MENAGERIE is to exhibit at Piqua, O., August 15th; Troy, 16th; Springfield, 17th; Urbana, 18th; Marysville, 19th, and Delaware, 20th.

C. W. NOYES wants first class equestrians, gymnasts, performing animals, a performing elephant and curiosities to travel with this winter. He also advertises side show and other privileges for sale.

E. D. COLVIN, manager of Forepaugh's Zoological and Equestrian Aggregation for several years past, has been ill for some time, with inflammatory rheumatism, and confined to his room, at the Walnut Street Hotel, Cincinnati. He has resigned his position, and will spend the remainder of the summer at his father's residence, Geneva, N. Y. Mr. Colvin is considered a very efficient and sagacious manager, and has the sympathy of Mr. Forepaugh and all the members of his company in his affliction. Mr. Colvin is now convalescent, and writes us that he will be on the road again next season.

JOHN STOWN'S CIRCUS appears to have had nothing but trouble and bad luck all the season, a brief epitome of which is furnished us by a correspondent:—"When at Mason, Mo., in the spring, Jimmy Reynolds attached the show for his salary; then, on entering Kansas, they found themselves in the midst of seven other companies. At Dubuque, on June 28th, Joe Tinkham attached one horse, a pony and a monkey, which he got in lieu of salary. The captain and the owner of the boat had a dispute, which detained the boat and show two days, causing them to lose Belleview and Savannah, two good towns. Going to Moline in a steamer, they ran on the rapids of the river and lost their afternoon show. They made Davenport, Iowa, on July 4th. At the close of the afternoon show the sheriff levied on the concern two attachments, one in favor of J. O. Davis, the advertiser, and the other in favor of Capt. Shannon, of the steamboat they were traveling on. This broke up the show. The company remained there until the 11th. Mr. Benjamin, a member of the band, having loaned Mr. Stowe considerable money to keep the show going, found himself compelled to pay off those attachments to protect his own interest, as he held a bill of sale of the whole property. They started out from Davenport on the 11th under Benjamin's management, and continued a sort of a commonwealth until July 22d, when Benjamin traded off the show for 320 acres of land in Illinois to W. A. Wallace, a land agent. A Mr. Brannen, who resides in Keokuk, became half proprietor, ran the show until Aug. 1st, and then laid up at Keokuk. Mr. Brannen is ready to start the show out again, provided some one will purchase Wallace's interest. Wallace, it appears, was a deacon in a church at Keokuk, and was expelled therefrom for buying an interest in the circus, and his wife says she will quit him if he has anything to do with the circus business. So, under the circumstances, it is not probable that Wallace will continue in the management. All of the performers with the circus have only received one week and three days' salary this season, and that they got from Mr. Brannen during the brief time he ran the show. Mr. Stowe has deserted to us and has became 'one-purchase one-half.'"

THE ATLANTIC AND PACIFIC CIRCUS performed in Denver, Col., Aug. 2d and 3d.

T. H. HODGES AND MLLE. LUCILLE WATSON join Stone and Murray's Circus at Bennington, Vt.

HEMMINGS AND COOPER'S CIRCUS is billed to perform at Bowling Green, Ky., Aug. 15th; Elkton, 16th; Princeton, 16th, and Hopkinsville, 17th.

HETWOOD'S PAVILION SHOW performed in Bennington, Vt., Aug. 9th; Hoosic Falls, 10th; thence to Arlington, Vt., Manchester and Dorset.

DAN RICE'S PAVILION CIRCUS exhibited at Hoosic Falls, Aug. 10th.

JOHNNY MCVEIGH, the stump orator of the side show with Van Amburgh & Co's Golden Menagerie, was presented at McHenry, Ill., on Aug. 7th, with a Chinese hat, elegantly decorated with ribbons, by the ladies connected with the side show. Charley White made the presentation.

WOOTTEN & HAIGHT'S EMPIRE CITY CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE embarked at Picton, N. S., Aug. 9th, on the steamer Emperor, to visit ports on the North shore of New Brunswick, Prince Edward's Island and Cape Breton, returning to Halifax during the regatta week, performing there four days, Aug. 28th, 29th, 30th and 31st; thence to Limenburg, Sept. 1st; Liverpool, 2d; Shelbourne, 4th; Yarmouth, 5th, and St. John, N. B., 6th and 7th. This company will disband in Boston, Mass., about the middle of September, when a company will be immediately formed for a year in the southern states.

A CIRCUS is wanted in Winchester, Ill.

G. & R. MCLEAR'S HIPPOTHEATRON performed in Mecklenburgh, N. Y., Aug. 10th; Havanna, 11th; Watkins, 12th; Dundee, 14th; Prattsburgh, 15th, and Rushville, 16th.

A BAREBACK OR HURDLE RIDER can get an engagement by applying to Clarty & Retiley, who advertise.

LAURENT'S TWO-ELEPHANT is billed to exhibit in Clinton, Mo., Aug. 16th.

JAMES ROBINSON'S GREAT CIRCUS AND CHAMPION SHOW is billed to exhibit in Washington, Aug. 21st, 22d, 23d and 24th. This will make the second show in that city this year.

CHAS. W. FISH, equestrian, at present traveling with J. H. Warner's Circus, is commendably noticed by the Detroit, Mich., press, as will be seen by the appended extracts:—

The bare-back accomplishments of Charles Fish was particularly fine. Although quite a young man, he accomplishes his dismount and daring feats in a manner rivaling any of the older equestrians, and his backward and forward somersaults are executed with an ease and certainty that we have yet to see equalled by any other bare-back rider.—Detroit Post, Aug. 8th, 1871.

The circus department of this exhibition is led by Charles Fish, the only acknowledged rival of James Robinson in bare-back equestrianism.—Detroit Free Press, Aug. 8th, 1871.

"OLD" JOHN ROBINSON'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE opened at the Lake Park, Chicago, Ill., on the 7th, for a season of one week. They are giving three exhibitions daily, at each of which a crowded tent greets the performers. The menagerie—occupying two large tents—is stocked with a large collection of animals, all of which are in fine condition. The circus features are a novelty and attract much attention. The circus department proper, in a separate tent, is of a high order, and comprises a company of first class artists. Robert Stickney's "four horse act" is always received with well merited applause, and is probably one of the greatest feats of horsemanship ever accomplished. The pad riding of Minnie Marks, Conrad's performing dogs and monkeys, Wm. Carroll's feats of jugging on horseback, and the bareback riding of the colored boy, Lewis, are entitled to praise. Everything connected with the show is of a superior order. So wrote our correspondent on August 11th.

ADAM FOREPAUGH'S Circus and Menagerie exhibited in Dayton, Ohio, on Friday, 11th. Mr. John Morrissey and Miss Cordelia Julick, two members of the company, were united in marriage in Covington, Ky., on the 9th, by Rev. Father Perrin. This will be remembered as a very fashionable affair, for whose alleged abduction Mr. Forepaugh has been sued by John Robinson for $43,800 damages.

LENT'S NEW YORK CIRCUS commences a season of one week at St. Louis, Mo., Aug. 14th.

DAN RICE'S PARIS PAVILION CIRCUS exhibited in Troy, N. Y., Aug. 7th, 8th, 9th and 10th, and is billed to exhibit at Albany, N. Y., 20th, 21st, 22d and 23d.

G. G. GRADY'S CIRCUS performed in Newark, O., Aug. 12th, and is billed ahead as follows:—Mount Vernon, 14th; London, 15th, and Columbus, 16th and 17th.

HANDENBURG & CO'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is billed to perform at Corry, Pa., Aug. 16th; Pleasantville, 17th; Centreville, 18th; Titusville, 19th; Petroleum Centre, 21st; Romeville, 21st; Oil City, 23d, and Franklin, 24th.

THE COMMONWEALTH CIRCUS exhibited in Albany, N. Y., Aug. 9th and 10th.

SHELDENBURGER'S CIRCUS AND MENAGERIE is billed to perform at Falmouth, Ky., Aug. 17th.

KIT CLARKE has been laid up with a fever at Louisville, Ky., but is rapidly recovering and expects to join Sheldenburger's Circus this week.

HEMMINGS AND COOPER'S MENAGERIE AND CIRCUS performed at Bowling Green, Ky., August 8th. A correspondent, writing on the 9th inst., says:—"The largest crowd of people were in the city that has been for a number of years to witness the show, and also a grand burlesque gotten up by the young men of Bowling Green, headed by Dick Lucas as chief marshal, and the world renowned Vossburg as the lion tamer, who entered the cage of ferocious horse (dogs) upon the streets during the parade. The burlesque procession paraded the principal streets in rear of the circus procession, with our fine cornet band, followed by a long line of circus performers, ladies and men in gay costume, then a dozen or more Arabs, a long line of Indians, followed by a caravan of cages containing all the rare animals and birds of our country, painted and striped up in an artistic manner, some 30 feet long, on top of one of the cages, made of wire and pasteboards, and painted in fine style; also, an elephant built upon an ox of huge dimensions and many other novelties. Such a large concourse of people were drawn together by the burlesque that the proprietors of the circus presented each and every performer of the burlesque, which numbered over a hundred, with a complimentary ticket to their exhibition. The day will long be remembered by both the show people and spectators as a grand gala day. There were over 2,000 people to witness the afternoon performance of Messrs. Hemmings and Cooper's Circus."

VAN AMBURGH & CO'S Circus and Menagerie, Hyatt Frost manager, exhibited at Evansville, Ind., August 10th, and our correspondent says, "over 600 people were turned from the doors unable to join admission."

Miscellaneous.

WASHBURN'S LAST SENSATION appears in Hartford, Conn., Aug. 26th; New Britain, 28th; Rockville, 29th; Willimantic, 30th; Colchester, 31st; New London, Sept. 1st. From the following press notices it will be seen that the troupe is meeting with success:—

Washburne's "Moral Sensation Troupe" appeared at the Opera House on Saturday evening, to a rousing house. The performance was first-class and satisfactory in every way. True to its name, it was in every sense a moral exhibition, and one which our citizens will remember with pleasure. It is different and unlike any we do not know that ever before was a similar exhibition given in a hall in this city. Leaping, tumbling, jumping, somersaulting, etc., on a stage is nothing novelty, associated as it is with the circus ring alone. But here, on the Opera House stage, a band of athletes, who positively excelled anything before attempted, gave us all and more than one usually sees at the circus, and stripped of all those improprieties seen but too often within the ring. The songs, especially by the beautiful Lina Zavistowski, and such a troupe of good musicians can render. Their orchestra too showed efficiency. The whole thing was a well-merited success. This company leaves Fallsdale and other like conveyances, preferring to travel by carriages of their own. We hope to see the last of the Washburne's England states, and by and by will come again to Bridgeport. They will be welcomed.—Bridgeport Conn. Evening Telegraph, 7th.

Music Hall was well filled last evening, notwithstanding the extreme heat, to witness the performances of the Washburne Troupe, which consisted of evolutions on the horizontal bar, clog dancing and a general variety entertainment. The artists are all first class, and judging from the applause and encores, gave satisfaction to their patrons. The representation of extreme old age by la petite Lillie Washburne, a child only eight years old, was rendered in fine style and was enthusiastically encored—New Haven Daily Palladium, Aug. 8th.

The Washburn Troupe has received some of the warmest encomiums of the press, and we know of no company more worthy of every word which has been said in its favor. The entertainment last evening was one of the most popular given in this city; the acrobatic performances were of a very superior character, and the singing and dancing very good. Mr. Washburne increases the excellence of his company every year, and receives, as he deserves, an increasing patronage. A cordially commend them to our brethren of the press.—Waterbury, Conn., Daily American, Aug. 11th.

THOUGHTS FOR THE GENEROUS.

The City of New York, among its many deserving and noble charities, has an institution known as the UNION HOME AND SCHOOL FOR THE DESTITUTE AND ORPHAN CHILDREN OF SOLDIERS AND SAILORS. Situate upon the new eleventh avenue, between One Hundred and Fiftieth and One Hundred and Fifty-first streets, stands a brick building of rather modest appearance, which affords, at present, inconvenient accommodations for nearly 300 little occupants, with their instructors.

Those little ones are the children of heroes who sacrificed their lives in defence of our country. Aside from the common claim which suffering and destitution is pardoned for advancing, they are entitled to a consideration which we pledged in our hour of need, and which will cost us but little to fulfill.

But one year ago the building was enlarged to accommodate its family of 200. To-day nearly 100 more are within its walls, and more land, new extensions to be built, and more workshops for teaching useful trades, are essential to its sphere of usefulness.

Thus far the Lady Managers, wives of some of our most esteemed fellow-citizens, have succeeded in supporting the Home and School in a highly creditable manner; but as applicants equally deserving of kind care are now daily reluctantly turned from the doors of the Home through inability to accommodate them, a plan has been decided upon to interest the general public, with the hope of deriving assistance to meet present and future wants.

With the kind letters of approval already received, the promoters of the Festival feel sanguine that the undertaking will not only prove a pecuniary success, but that as a testimonial benefit from the public, it will enlist a wide-spread interest, and be one of the most enjoyable series of entertainments ever given in this country.

BENJAMIN W. HITCHCOCK,
General Manager, 29 Beekman st., New York.

SPECIAL NOTICE.

RICE, GODDARD & CO.,

STEAM POWER

Printers,

BOSTON,

would inform their friends and the public generally that they

HAVE REMOVED

from the old stand to the large and commodious building

39 & 41 MILK ST.,

where, with extensively increased facilities in every department, they are prepared to do at SHORT notice in all its varieties at the most reasonable prices.

SHOW PRINTING

ATTENTION

is called to the FACT that we do

POSTERS

(SIZE 29x42) IN

5 or 6

DIFFERENT COLORS,

BEAUTIFULLY ILLUMINATED and BLENDED TOGETHER BY OUR PATENT PROCESS, in a very attractive style, for $9 per 100. Very cheap in large quantities.

BEAR IN MIND

the usual price for two colors in $9 per 100, and that we charge no more for a FIVE DIFFERENT color bill than is usually charged for one in TWO colors only.

OUR NEW STREAMER

letter, in three colors, Blue, Red and Green; size 28x40; entirely new and novel in design and finish. Price, $9 per 100.

MANAGERS

using half or whole sheet streamer letters in large quantities can have them SPECIALLY COLORED FOR THEIR EXCLUSIVE use at NO EXTRA CHARGE.

WOOD BLOCKS

that have been discarded as useless on account of their novelty having worn off can be used as NEW when printed in VARIEGATED COLORS by our patent process, THEREBY SAVING THE EXPENSE OF NEW BLOCKS and STILL HAVING SOMETHING NOVEL for THE FALL AND WINTER SEASON.

NEW BLOCKS

cut to order and PRINTED IN COLORS at VERY LOW RATES. The fact that Mr. C. H. Adams (long and favorably known as one of the best wood engravers in the country), has charge of our Wood Engraving Department is sufficient guarantee that all orders will be executed in a SUPERIOR manner.

TO MANAGERS AND AGENTS.

Realizing a want that has long been felt in this city for a suitable place to prepare copy, etc., when in a hurry, we have fitted up a portion of our office with ample desk room and other conveniences that cannot fail to be appreciated. Please call and see us, or send for samples, before ordering elsewhere. All orders for Color Printing from Traveling, Dramatic, Minstrel or Variety Companies must be accompanied with one-half the cash, balance to be made C. O. D. Orders for streamer letters sent C. O. D.
